AT BRITAIN'S GENERAL ELECTION, next Thursday, surprises are expected. Austen Chamberlain may lose his seat. Birmingham is radical and "Labor." Lady Astor, contributed to the House of Commons by Virginia, has a hard fight, and is able to handle it. Including rough words and actions by some who think her husband too rich. It is generally expected that Baldwin will win, by a much reduced majority, with Labor a close second, and Lloyd George's Liberal party with barely 60 members, but enough perhaps, to give him the balance of power.

The British are fortunate in their national leaders. Baldwin, Lloyd George and Ramsay MacDonald are all men of unselfish patriotism and real ability.

One British gentleman almost in earnest has recently suggested this: America is very rich. We are hard up. Why not let America run its own country and ours, and help pay our taxes in an Anglo-American empire. Having the brains, we British would easily get control, and run the whole thing. That sounds conceited, unless you consider the source.

Sun Yat Sen, President of China, dead for a long time, not yet definitely buried, is on his way to his final resting place, in the mountains, near Nanking.

What will be written on his tomb?

"Here lies one who established Republican government too soon" might do.

Some student should write a book on the epitaphs of conquerors and statesmen. Napoleon's inscription recites that he wished to be buried beside the Seine, among the French people, "whom I have so much loved."

Republican France should long ago have added "and whom I so plentifully slaughtered," but the great Italian brought glory to France and men cling to glory.

In Samarkand, on the tomb of Tamerlane, greatest Asiatic killer, except Jenghis Khan, was written: "This is the resting place of the illustrious and merciful Monarch, the most great Sultan, and the most mighty warrior, Lord Timur, conqueror of the earth."

Tamerlane built pyramids of human skulls, lighted from within. If he was merciful, you can imagine what the others were.

But he did rebuild magnificent Samarkand, where Jenghis ruled before him and where Alexander, in drunken anger, killed Clitus, his best friend.

It is easy to theorize, easy to have a special session of Congress concentrating on farm relief.

Theory and the special session did not keep wheat from dropping to a new low record for the season last week.

Farmers, in an age of intensive mass production, work on in the old disorganized individualistic way. Farm relief will be needed until farm work is organized on modern lines. No man in an old wheelwright shop could make a living building automobiles.

Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador, politely suggests that foreign representatives give up their right to import alcohol beverages. Any thing to oblige the administration in these debt adjusting days.

The French embassy, emphatically says: "No, thank you. We do not care to live on icewater, ice cream and mince pie. When we go to China, we do not eat birds' nest soup, we do not eat buckwheat cakes with sausages or drink ice cream soda water in America."

President Hoover, having seen the world and knowing its way, would not dream of forcing America's feeble attempt at teetotalism on foreign representatives.

Steamfitters and Plumbers' Unions threaten to tie up $500,000,000 worth of building in Chicago because of quarrels between unions.

Unable to agree among themselves as to their "jurisdiction," in certain lines of work, the unions would stop building, throw out of work thousands of men with whom they have no quarrel, tie up the business, capital and machinery of building.

Such stupidity is worthy of angry chimpanzees, not of intelligent American mechanics. It is calculated to alienate public sympathy from unions. They are none too strong as it is, with jobs plentiful, wages high, dues and strikes rather a bore.

HUNT BODY IN GIRL MYSTERY

A girl's blood-stained clothing, tied in a white pillow slip hanging from a tree limb in a secluded, wooded spot near the shore of Mill Pond, off Huron ave., Cambridge, today presented police with a mystery which may disclose a murder.

Search of the woods for the body began shortly after the discovery.

While police considered plans for dragging the pond a check at Radcliffe College and the Sargent school disclosed that no students were missing.

Patrolman Asa. Bernier, of the Brattle sq. division, made the gruesome discovery shortly after 2 a. m. when he entered the secluded road leading to the pond shore in search of "petters" who sometimes violate the police regulations in the vicinity.

The white pillow slip, hanging

SALTONSTALL IS FOR 'L' RETURN

Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of the House surprised his colleagues today by taking the floor, for the first time in the present session, and announcing himself in favor of returning the Boston Elevated to private ownership, but with a referendum to the people on the issue.

ASK OUSTER OF GOODWIN IN TESTS

A resolution aimed at removal of Chairman Eliot H. Goodwin of the Civil Service Commission, because of his insistence on rigid physical examinations for Boston police men seeking promotion, was introduced in the City Council today by Councillor John F. Dowd of Roxbury.

The resolution would have the city council petition the governor to remove the civil service head because of "his unfitness for the office which he holds."

Councillor Dowd's resolution read:

"Whereas, the Boston City Council deplores the unnecessarily stringent regulations promulgated by the present chairman of the Civil Service Commission

CASASSA TO LOCK UP 2 PLACES

Following picturesque raids on two restaurants, in which he personally participated, Mayor Andrew A. Casassa of Revere suspended a policeman he found in one place and announced that he would take legal action to have both places padlocked.

Patrolman Daniel J. Sullivan was suspended. The mayor ordered him dropped from service for 30 days for "conduct unbecoming an officer."

According to Mayor Casassa, he found Sullivan sitting in full uniform in a cafe at a time he was supposed to be patrolling his beat.

Sullivan told the mayor he went into the restaurant to get a cup of coffee.

According to Mayor Casassa, when he entered a cafe in Bath st. he found a girl sitting on a man's lap and another girl with her arms around a man's neck.

No liquor was found, although a search was made, the mayor announcing that he had personally watched the restaurant many nights and observed men leaving with bottles. After leaving the place he said he would see that it was closed and padlocked.

The raiding squad, which included Lieut. Cornelius Cronin and several policemen also visited a restaurant in Shirley ave., Revere, owned by Edigio Perisick. As they entered Perisick went into the kitchen, according to Mayor Casassa, and threw a jug out a window.

The mayor went into the back yard, picked up a jug and found it contained half a gallon of wine, he said.

LAUDS SMOKING IN PRISONS

By NANCY BREWSTER

Although she believes there is too much pity shown women prisoners, Mrs. Carl R. Chamberlain, a member of the Detroit House of Correction Commission, attending the biennial council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Swampscott, sees practical benefits in permitting them to smoke.

Mrs. Chamberlain said that women prisoners in Detroit are allowed two smoking periods, one in the afternoon and one in the evening, each lasting half an hour, and this serves to keep them from trying to get tobacco or drugs by secret means.

She represents the Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs at the biennial council which is in session at the New Ocean House, with

STOCK MARKET IN BIG BREAK

New York, May 27 (AP)—The stock market again broke wide open today, scores of issues tumbling $2 to $12 a share, many breaking through the low levels reached in last Wednesday's drastic collapse.

GOODWIN'S REMOVAL FOR "DEATH TESTS" SOUGHT IN COUNCIL

BOARD TO BE PROBED ON HILL

pertaining to its attention in service and the promotion of those already in the public service, and

"Whereas, the enforcement of these unusually harsh regulations and other official acts of the present chairman of the Civil Service Commission present cumulative evidence of his unfitness for the office which he holds, be it therefore

"Resolved, that the Boston City Council respectfully petition His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to remove from office the present chairman of the Civil Service Commission."

"DEATH TESTS" SUSPENDED.

Tomorrow the joint rules committee of the Legislature will hold a hearing at 10 a. m. on an order presented by Senator Joseph A. Mulhern for an investigation of the civil service department, and in particular the methods of conducting physical examinations.

Councillor Dowd's resolution followed by only a few hours the announcement by Patrick J. McMahon, one of the civil service commissioners, that physical examinations for Boston police seeking promotion would be discontinued temporarily.

The "bunion board," so-called, will have no more examinations until at least a week from tomorrow, Commr. McMahon said, when the three members of the board will meet and probably will be presented with a formal demand by police heads that the physical tests be abandoned.

Commissioner McMahon is the only one of the three board members now in the city. The absentees are Commissioners Goodwin and Wilson.

It is understood at police headquarters that if the board refuses to accede to the demand that rigid physical examinations be abandoned or at least made less severe, the matter will be laid before Governor Allen.

Stress will be put on the death of Sergt. John J. Montague of the Lagrange st. station, who died last week at his Howe st., Dorchester, home, from a broken blood-vessel, suffered, it is claimed, in lifting heavy weights as part of the examinations.

POLICE AT FUNERAL

Funeral services for Sergt. Montague were held today from his home, with a high mass of requiem sung at 9 a. m. in St. Peter's Church, Dorchester, by the Rev. Leo O'Day.

Led by Motorcycle Officers Chester Murray and Ernest Worster, a detail of 16 policemen from the Fields Corner station escorted the body from the house to the church.

Pallbearers were Sergts. John McNeeley of the Fields Corner station, William Kerrigan of the Roxbury Crossing station, William Twomey of the Athens st. station, John Gale of the E. Dedham st. station, Henry Patterson of the Dudley st. station and George Bailey of headquarters.

Permanent half pay for the widow of Sergt. Montague will be sought by Senator Joseph F. Mulhern of Dorchester, he announced today as he was drawing up a bill toward that end to be filed with the clerk of the Senate.

No Mere Gesture This — But a Heartfelt Tribute

At the funeral of Police Sergt. John F. Montague of the Lagrange st. station from St. Peter's Church, Meeting House Hill, the customary stern visages of his comrades, gathered to pay last tribute, were softened by the deep emotion the policemen felt for the departed officer. A detail, including Supt. Michael H. Crowley and Capt. Louis E. Lutz, stood at attention as the body was taken from the church for burial in Worcester. (Staff photo.)

LAUDS SMOKING BY WOMEN IN PRISONS

hundreds of representatives of 14,000 clubs in attendance from every state in the union and several foreign lands.

"Women should not let emotion get the better of them," said Mrs. Chamberlain, in an interview. "That is the keynote of the situation.

"I would like to see less pity on the part of women for women prisoners and more sane thinking on prison conditions. Women's clubs can aid in this.

"Women should meet men on men's grounds, not with dictatorial attitude, but with a willingness to listen until they have grasped the background.

WARNS OF EMOTIONS

"A great reformation in prisons can be brought about by a study of the living conditions of girls who have difficulty with the law."

With the last of the late arrivals accounted for, the cream of the world's clubwomen settled down to the serious business for which this meeting has been called.

This is the 13th biennial council.

Today's program includes a meeting of the executive committee, a conference of state presidents and department chairmen, followed by individual meetings of the two groups, a state directors' luncheon and a meeting of the board of directors.

But tonight this series of meetings will be climaxed by the official welcome extended to these distinguished visitors by Massachusetts club leaders. It is to take the form of a state dinner, at which the Bay State's most eminent women are to act as honorary hostesses, and for which Mrs. Azel A. Packard, state president, will act as toastmistress.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Frank G. Allen, Mrs. Esther A. Andrews, Mrs. Anna C. Tillinghast, and Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers will take their places at the head of this tremendous delegation of associated womanhood.

MANY IMPORTANT ISSUES

It is not to be a social whirl for the club executives although social festivities are to have their place. Nor is it primarily a meeting to afford a sight-seeing view of the beauties of the North Shore and historic Boston, although such trips are to be sandwiched in between crowded rounds of meetings and conferences and brief moments of respite.

Today's meetings are preliminary to the compact program which officially opens the biennial council tomorrow morning, presided over by Mrs. John P. Sippel, national president, and Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, first vice-president.

"The General Federation as It Serves the Community," is to be the keynote of the sessions and the thought will be reflected in the speeches made by experts and in the reports made by department chairmen.

Community service, the home, citizenship, public welfare, health and child welfare, fine arts, international relations, education and legislation, these are but few of the subjects which will confine the women to serious discussion of the issues pertinent to the future safety and institutional stability of the country, if not the world.

WELCOMED DELEGATES

The general get-together today will help the club leaders to assimilate the details for their reports and resumes to be made in the following four-way program.

The General Federation represents 2,000,000 clubwomen.

Under the direction of Mrs. J. Norman Jeffery of Salem a corps of clubwomen chauffeurs met the representatives and "taxied" them to the New Ocean House where their credentials were recognized.

"Show the visitors what hospitality really means," has been Mrs. Poole's message to the State clubs for months.

That New England holds a distinctive place in the rest of the United tSates is true, but let it not hold too distinctive a place for reservedness. Mrs. Poole, has cautioned the members.

Raps Power Trust's 'Cowardly Tactics'

Calling the control of newspapers by the power interests "a cowardly way of fighting," the Rev. Carlyle Summerbell denounced this practice in a sermon from the pulpit of the Roslindale Unitarian Church. He said, in part:

Rev. C. Summerbell

"In Morrison Swift's book, 'The Evil Religion Does,' this caustic author makes the following grave charge against religion:

"The one impregnable preserver of greed, acquisitiveness, injustice, inhumanity, superstition, disease, deprivation, degradation and social death is religion.

"But should not Mr. Swift make distinction between real and false religious ideals? Greed is common to many men; it is the lack of a good religion that makes men greedy. I cannot understand why men who have so much as, for instance, the gentlemen who control the International Paper and Power Co., instead of being satisfied with their great holdings buy the channels of news to the people.

"These channels of news are supposed to be sincere, especially their editorial columns. Yet such a newspaper man as Robert Lincoln O'Brien, who recently addressed our ministerial association, says ownership opinion remains the one basic thing in the conduct of a newspaper. And certainly Mr. O'Brien, former editor and part owner of the Boston Herald knows, if anyone knows.

"Then—think of the greed of these wealthy men—buying up numerous newspapers, not permitting the people to fight their own battles with their own weapons. In other words, taking away their natural leaders, so that they will be confused about what is their best interest.

"Does it really seem, to men who reason, a fair way of fighting in the scramble of getting all you can?

"I am pleased that our own religious paper, 'The Christian Register,' in no unmerited terms denounces this cowardly way of fighting. I do not think the workers so culpable as the swollen Trust people; for the newspaper men are dependent on their livelihood, and have families dependent upon them. They are like all of us.

"Mr. Gannett, when he saw the idea of this maneuver to control his papers, immediately borrowed the money from the bank, and paid off the Power Trust. I was talking to his minister this week, who is a special friend of mine; and he spoke of the highest terms of his parishioner. Mr. Gannett owns many newspapers and will own more. But he thinks more of integrity than to be subservient to the great Power Trust.

"What but true religion of an enlightened type will stop the greed of the unscrupulous monopolist?

"How can we have upright free men if money is their God?

"Jesus thought it mighty hard for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. We are beginning to wonder if he was not about right.

"A religion that would excuse, keep quiet about or tolerate economic war on truthful people, should receive the utmost condemnation by all men of decent religious convictions."

YOUNG OFFERS NEW PLAN ON REPARATIONS

Paris, May 27 (AP)—Owen D. Young, Sir Josiah Stamp and Emile Moreau were trying a last remedy on the reparations committee today in hope of finally saving it from the fate which has been pending the last four weeks.

The American expert was actively negotiating with the creditor delegates on a new combination, the nature of which thus far has been withheld, but is supposed to be quite a new scheme that will get around the conditions imposed by the Germans and the reservations put forward by the allies.

The Germans have failed to reply to the creditors' memorandum concerning the conditions and reservations to the annuities recently suggested by Mr. Young. At the German headquarters it was said no written reply would be made, since Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, chief of the German delegations, explained the German position amply to Mr. Young.

from the branch, caught his eye. An inspection of its contents revealed a girl's clothing, all of summer texture. On a white silk slip there were three bloodstains, and similar stains appeared on a yellow pongee blouse and a brown skirt. Stuffed in the bag was a dark felt hat and a pair of white, one-strap leather slippers, crepe rubber-soled and showing little wear.

There were no stockings.

Patrolman Bernier communicated with his superiors, and Lieut. William Ginty and Patrolman Frank McLaughlin were sent to aid Bernier in a search of the district.

There was no sign of a struggle in the woods and there were the tracks of too many automobiles to furnish a clue.

At daybreak additional police were sent to the locality for a thorough search and deliberated whether to drag the pond.

The possibility that foul play had been committed and the body disposed of in the waters was strengthened with the discovery, soon after, that branches of bushes overhanging the pond near the spot had been freshly broken, as if some burden had been tossed through them from the shore.

MEDICAL CARE BIG PROBLEM-WILBUR

Washington, May 27 (AP)—The intricacy of the problems and pitfalls confronting the committee on the cost of medical care in its effort to bring modern medical care within the reach of all who need it was outlined by Secretary Wilbur, its chairman, today.

"The great question before us," he told the semi-annual meeting of the committee, "is whether we can develop sound American methods for distribution of scientific medical care to all the population at a cost they can meet.

Citing a lack of reliable figures as to the amount of illness requiring attention and the average cost to individual or family, he said, "it seemed clear many millions were not receiving adequate, up-to-date medical attention."

The money was to have been used to defray the expenses of the doctors.

CANTER GUILTY, JURY FINDS

as his attorney was engaged in another court. Judge Raymond agreed to pass sentence Wednesday at 9:30 a. m.

The verdict was returned sealed this morning by the jury, which reached an agreement Friday afternoon.

The defamation occurred during a demonstration following the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Canter carried a placard lettered: "Fuller, Murderer of Sacco and Vanzetti."

During the course of the trial, at which he was represented by Arthur Garfield Hays, prominent New York attorney, Canter testified the placard he carried during the demonstration on November 8 represented his own personal belief that former Governor Fuller was morally responsible for the deaths of the two slayers.

Several attempts were made during the trial to lay before the jury evidence of conversations which Fuller had on various occasions with counsel and members of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee, but Judge Raymond denied any attempts to reopen the Sacco debate, and excluded the jury from the room during offers of proof of such evidence. These offers of proof he denied.

In his charge to the jury, to which defense counsel took exception, Judge Raymond instructed them not to return a verdict on what the defendant might have believed the word "murderer" meant in his own mind, but to judge him on how the world would accept the term.

Canter had testified he believed the former Governor "morally responsible" for the radicals' death and still believes him to be.

Neither Mr. Fuller, President Lowell of Harvard nor President Stratton of Technology were called during the trial when it became apparent the court would admit no testimony not directly relevant to the defamation.

Church Declares Dances Fail to Win Youth

Cleveland, May 27 (AP)—Dances, parties and athletics have failed as an inducement to spiritual life among young people.

This opinion was expressed in a report of the activities committee of Tifereth Israel Congregation, prepared with the endorsement of Rabbi A. H. Silver, leader of Liberal Judaism and unanimously adopted by its members.

It means the abandonment of accentuated extra-religious activity by one of the first synagogues adopting the measure to arouse spiritual thought in the minds of the young.

SENATE DEFIED BY REPORTER IT BARRED

Washington, May 27 (AP)—Paul Mallon, correspondent for the United Press, who published a roll call purporting to show the vote in executive session of the Senate on confirmation of Irvine Lenroot as a judge of the court of customs appeals, today refused to tell the Senate Rules Committee the source of his information.

Mallon's roll call finally led to a ruling by Vice-President Curtis that all press association representatives should be denied the privilege of going on the floor of the Senate. Previously the Senate rules committee had voted to deny this privilege to the United Press Associations.

Called before the committee, Mallon read a prepared statement which said he had been advised by counsel that he was not obliged to appear before the committee, be sworn, or testify because the committee "has not authority to subpoena me before it or require me to answer any questions."

SALTONSTALL FOR 'L' RETURN

the House last week in rejecting all Elevated bills was moved by Representative Wadsworth, leader of the advocates of privote ownership and operation. Speaker Saltonstall spoked uring the debate on this motion.

The Speaker also recommended that there be another amendment added to the Wadsworth measure to lay the foundation for rapid transit extensions, including the Chelsea-Revere problem.

He said that while he did not like to disagree with that part of the Governor's inaugural in which extension of public control was recommended, he felt—as the Governor himself feels—that definite action should be taken at this session.

The House last week voted down three solutions offered for the Elevated problem, these being the Senate bill for extension of public control, the Wadsworth bill for return to private operation and the Twohig measure for public ownership. Since then the Twohig amendment for a referendum has been added to the second solution.

SOUTH BOSTON HUSBAND BEGS FOR DIVORCE

Fear of his wife, Alice Mooney Caruso of South Boston prevents Antonio Caruso of Everett from taking out life insurance, he told Judge John C. Legget in Middlesex county probate court today, while his suit for divorce and custody of two young children.

"Are you really afraid of your wife?" asked Judge Legget.

"I certainly am," replied Caruso. "I have refrained from taking out life insurance because of fear that she would kill me and endeavor to collect the insurance."

In asking for divorce on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment, Caruso related an alleged incident he said occurred October 2 last. "My wife and I had an argument," he testified, "and she picked up a kitchen chair, held it over her head and rushed at me with it. Fearing she would hit me I barricaded myself in an adjoining room. She battered the door and after gaining access hit me on the head and back with what remained of the chair.

"On another occasion when I gave her $20 she remonstrated. I pushed her out of a store where the money was given. She then threw stones through the window at me.

"She packed up her clothes and left me January 11 last, after tossing the furniture around. She wanted to go out that evening. I objected and so she left me."

Caruso charged his wife with being friendly with a man whose name was not divulged. He testified he went to a hospital where his wife was ill and found the man there visiting her.

Wife in Auto With "Other Man, Witness Testifies

An automobile ride with another man, a few days after her marriage, led to the divorce court today when Roscoe Gilbert of Bigelow st., Cambridge, sued to divorce his wife, Ruth, in Middlesex Probate Court before Judge Arthur Keene. The couple lived together only three weeks after their marriage on Oct. 8, 1928.

Herbert A. Hall, a Cambridge man, was the star witness. He testified that a few days after Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert were married a car drove up to his filling station. Mrs. Gilbert was in the car with a man and her husband, he said.

"A few days later I went to a party in Cambridge and saw Mrs. Gilbert there with another man," Hall continued. "They were sitting close together.

Later that evening I went into a darkened room to get my hat and coat. As I turned on the light I saw Mrs. Gilbert and the man."

The case was taken under advisement.

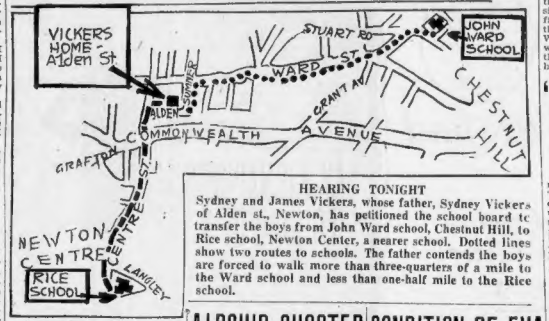
'INSTALLMENT FINES' CALLED OFF IN QUINCY

The installment system of paying fines is a thing of the past, so far as Quincy court is concerned and henceforth the district court business will be conducted on a strictly cash or carry basis. If you don't have the cash, they carry you off to jail.

Judge Albert R. Avery announced the new policy of the court today when he remanded to Dedham jail eight defendants who had not the wherewithal to meet the individual $15 fines imposed by the court upon them for drunkenness and other misdemeanors. In jail they will work out the fines at the rate of 50 cents per day.

The leniency of the court in giving prisoners time to make payments has not been appreciated, Judge Avery declared.



HEARING TONIGHT

Sydney and James Vickers, whose father, Sydney Vickers of Alden st., Newton, has petitioned the school board to transfer the boys from John Ward school, Chestnut Hill, to Rice school, Newton Center, a nearer school. Dotted lines show two routes to schools. The father contends the boys are forced to walk more than three-quarters of a mile to the Ward school and less than one-half mile to the Rice school.

HAVE TO WALK ALMOST TWO MILES DAILY

Because Sidney G. Vickers, Boston broker, living at 5 Alden st., Newton Center, has submitted no written request to the Newton school board, the board tonight will take no action on the transfer of his two children from the John Ward school to the Rice school.

Three weeks ago Vickers' request for the transfer was turned down by School Supt. Ulysses G. Wheeler, and Vickers declared he would carry the fight to the school board.

At a previous meeting the board failed to take action because the father had not sent in a written request, and up to this forenoon no such request had been received, according to George Kellar, secretary of the committee.

Secretary Kellar intimated that the committee would back up Supt. Wheeler in the event that it is appealed to.

Vickers declared early in May that his two children, Sidney, Jr., six and a half years old, and James, five, are forced to walk more than three-quarters of a mile to the Ward school in Chestnut Hill, whereas the Rice school is less than half a mile from the Vickers home.

PEACE IN POLE WAR IS UP TO RESIDENTS

Dorchester's telephone pole war is nearly over. It remains only for the residents of Oakton ave. who refused to permit the Telephone Company to erect a pole in front of the property of Mrs. Mary Fitzpatrick, their commander-in-chief, to dictate the terms of peace.

Mrs. Mary Fitzpatrick, who kept a day and night vigil to prevent the Telephone Company from erecting the last pole, now keeps constant watch at the side of her nineteen-months-old son who was operated on for stomach trouble on Saturday.

Meet Under Trees to Bail an Autoist

A Watertown citizen, the Hanson police chief and the Brockton city clerk all met at the Brockton-Abington line to make this a story.

The Hanson chief arrested J. Theo Shurman, the Watertown citizen, on charges of driving and drunkenness, following an accident in Hanson. Shurman sought to bail himself out, which was agreeable to everyone, the drawback being that the Hanson bail commissioner was out automobiling with his family.

The Abington bailiieur (if such there be) likewise had taken advantage of the fine weather to go into the country.

Under city law any city official may accept bail, providing the payment takes place within his own city. Reached by phone, Brockton City Clerk Charles F. King agreed to motor to the Abington line, provided the prisoner was taken to the Brockton line.

Per agreement, the police chief, the prisoner and the city clerk met at the designated spot beneath the trees, right hands were raised, oaths were taken, the bail was passed, and the prisoner released.

BABY IS LEFT ON PORCH BY MOTHER

Methuen, May 27—With a pathetic note, signed "A Desperate Mother," pinned to his clothing, a five-weeks-old boy was found abandoned early today on the front stoop of the home of John Kodia, 219 Howe st.

The infant was in a market basket which had been improvised into a portable bassinet.

The clothing on the boy, while clean and neat, was of inexpensive material.

The note, in a woman's fine handwriting, said:

"Please be kind to my baby. I am leaving his fate and future to your kindness. The baby's name is Henry. He is not born out of wedlock, but poverty and circumstances compel me to do this harsh deed.

"I release all my rights to him. You will receive a sum of money and a message every month. My husband has left me and I am the mother of five children. You will never see me and I will never see the baby again.

"Trusting to the Almighty God. A Desperate Mother."

Police Capt. Frank Cody took the baby to the Methuen police station and then to Lawrence General Hospital.

Paging You, Girls

Congressman Dewey Short of Missouri, speaker at B. U. celebration in the Arena

HE PROPOSES TO ALL B. U. GIRLS IN PUBLIC

From the stage in the Boston Arena today Congressman Dewey Short of Missouri, graduate of Boston University in 1922, announced to the world generally and scores of pretty co-eds in the amphitheater, that he is looking for a wife.

The Missouri congressman and U. S. Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio were the principal speakers at the Boston University convocation in celebration of the 60th anniversary of the signing of the university charter by Governor Claflin, May 26, 1869.

"I am in the matrimonial market and am looking for a girl to be my wife," Congressman Short declared to the capacity audience. "My visit to Boston is chiefly in the interest of Boston University, but, don't forget, I am here also in the interest of myself.

"I am a bachelor and am looking for the right girl. As a candidate for matrimony—if any of you girls, or any girls, are interested, kindly communicate with me at the Hotel Roosevelt in Washington."

The Boston University alumnus commented humorously on the social war in the capital that broke when Mrs. Gann, sister of Vice-President Curtis, was alleged to have been snubbed in the seating arrangements at formal dinners.

"They are constantly bringing in new weapons and new methods in the society war being waged there," he said, "but if any one of them had a sense of humor, he would laugh himself to death.

"It is most amusing—but if you want more amusement, I can talk about Congress, particularly the Senate."

The congressman gave high praise to his alma mater and congratulated those of his listeners who were students, for being fortunate enough to attend the institution.

"At Boston University," he said, "you are not only taught how to make a living but how to live also."

Senator Fess, who will be the principal speaker at the convocation banquet tonight, but who substituted for Senator David I. Walsh, who was unable to be present, spoke briefly on the work of the Senate, the "hardest body in the world to talk to."

NEW WAR FACTS FOR VETS OF 2D DIVISION

Eleven years ago next Friday:

"The weather was clear and the sun hot and merciless on this last day of May. The hard Rue Nationale and the lesser roads bore a top-dressing of dust as fine and white as talcum powder. The dust rose and hung thick in the still air, so that each motor column went in a cloud of its own making. The camions went up the right of the road; on the other side, coming down, was the melancholy flow of refugees—a countryside in flight. The Boche had broken through again."

1929 COMING HERE

Eleven years ago. And on Thursday, Friday and Saturday 2000 former members of the Second Division who took part in the Belleau Wood engagement will gather at the Elks Hotel, Boston, to commemorate that drive which had such an important bearing upon the conclusion of the World War.

The description of conditions on that day when the drive began and of the fire-red days that followed is contained in the Belleau Wood monograph completed by the Second Division historical committee and ready for the veterans when they gather here.

THREE YEARS' RESEARCH

It is from the pen of Capt. John W. Thomason, Jr., of the Marine Corps, author and illustrator, and is part of the gigantic Second Division historical project to which German original army records were checked with those of the American army in the detail of 10 high-casualty attacks.

In preparation of the record, Capt. Thomason spent three months in Germany, and every statement of the monograph is supported by reference and has been checked by 200 army officers. Maps of his own sketching will aid the Second Division regulars in their reminiscence over the Belleau Wood battleground.

LAY KIDNAPINGS TO GIRL OF 8

Police today definitely placed the blame for three recent Saturday baby "abductions" in Roxbury upon an eight-year-old girl whose identity will not be made public unless they decide to prosecute her, which seems unlikely.

The child is of sub-normal mentality and police officials today doubted the wisdom of preferring any charge against her.

In the most recent case, that of three-year-old Elizabeth Kerr, on last Saturday, no harm came to the infant, victim and the authorities believe parental means to prevent the girl from causing another flight will solve the Roxbury "kidnapping" mysteries.

HOUSE IN BATTLE ON ALIEN CENSUS

Washington, May 27—The Senate's battle over reapportioning the House of Representatives revolved today around a proposal to exclude all aliens from the next census.

The proposal would slash the congressional representation of all large cities and many of the Great Lakes and North Atlantic states. It would increase the number of congressional seats apportioned to rural communities and to the Southern and farm belt states.

Administration forces were divided upon the proposition, as were the Democrats. Senator Beckett (R.) of Kentucky, a strong Hoover follower, sponsored the amendment and it had a warm supporter in Senator Black (D.) of Alabama.

Famous Beauty Expert Tells Secret Of Lovely Hands

MRS. PEARL ECKER HUBBELL

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Mrs. Pearl Ecker Hubbell, dean of the National School of Cosmeticians, advises women on keeping their hands exquisitely white and smooth.

She says: "For women in their homes I can think of no better aid in protecting their hands than the use of Lux suds in all cleaning and dishwashing.

"In selecting the best soap for use in manicuring we chose Lux as gentlest to the hands. We use just a few of the delicate Lux flakes to make a bowlful of pure, sparkling suds. Lux suds cleanse so gently and soothe the skin, keep the hands beautifully white and smooth.

"Ordinary soaps may roughen and coarsen and age the hands, make them look prematurely old. Lux is so pure, so gentle, that it never irritates or roughens the skin, never dries up its delicate oils.

"Therefore I can't imagine finer beauty care for the hands of the home-maker than Lux suds in the dishpan."

Women to Make June 4 "Suffrage Day"

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the national headquarters committee on arrangements, says the opportunity will be taken not only to observe the suffrage victory but to urge "a second amendment to complete the work started by the first."

MRS. SCANLAN OUTLINES DRY SURVEY PLAN

Mrs. Frank A. Scanlan of Milton, president of the Margaret Brent Civic Guild, a prominent organization of Catholic women, made known today her plans for one of the most comprehensive dry surveys ever undertaken in the state.

"The guild is very much dissatisfied with the dry situation in Massachusetts," said Mrs. Scanlan, "and we intend to put before the public all the facts that we can gather.

"The state will be divided into seven districts. I intend to appoint as chairmen of these districts women of prominence in civic affairs. These chairmen will, in turn, elect their sub-chairmen.

"No stone will be left unturned to give the public all the facts. We intend to consult educators, college groups, welfare workers, parent-teacher organizations and mothers of families.

"We shall conduct this survey in every city in the State, and also in the rural districts. After the survey is completed, I feel that the guild will have ascertained the real attitude of the people of the State."

Mrs. Scanlan said she expects to pick the district chairmen before the end of the week. The first meeting of the chairmen will be at the Hotel Buckminster about the middle of June.

GIRL AUTHOR TO SUE O'NEILL OVER BOOK

New York, May 27 (INS)—Some time today, according to Daniel F. Cohalan, a former judge, a suit will be filed in United States District Court here charging Eugene O'Neill, America's foremost playwright, with plagiarism in the writing and production of the enormously successful play, "Strange Interlude."

Judge Cohalan said he would demand damages of $1,750,000 from O'Neill, the playwright's publishers, Horace Liveright, Inc., and his producers, the Theater Guild, Inc., in behalf of his client, Miss Georgea Lewys, a writer of classical poetry and dramatic fiction.

Miss Lewys, Cohalan asserts, alleged that "Strange Interlude" is in reality her story, "The Temple of Pallas Athenae," which she published on May 10, 1924, and copyrighted July 12, 1924. The book, which was written when she was 18, was limited to 995 copies and was purchased chiefly by authors and professional readers at a price of $20 a copy.

4 Cookery Experts rediscover a lost Art

They decide by unanimous vote, after exhaustive tests, in favor of sugar and small amount of water in cooking vegetables.

Four well-known cooking experts recently conducted a series of unique tests in a kitchen high up in a New York skyscraper. The purpose of the tests was to decide, that every person in the United States might know, the most delicious of all ways for cooking vegetables.

Numerous of these healthful foods were cooked: 1. With liberal water without sugar. 2. With little water and no sugar. 3. Liberal water with sugar. 4. Little water with sugar. In every case, when the vote was taken, liberal water without sugar lost, and in every case little water with sugar won.

What a simple discovery this is, and yet how far-reaching it can be. It means that children and adults can be encouraged to eat enough of the vitamin and mineral-bearing vegetables, because a small amount of sugar makes them more palatable.

Eminent medical and scientific authorities are warning the people of the United States that extreme dieting for slimness has gone too far. The health of young girls is being endangered by undernutrition, and the health of thousands of women and men is being permanently injured. Health in diet comes from eating good foods, varied foods, flavored to please the taste. Sugar used judiciously in their preparation makes cereals, fruits, vegetables and meats more enjoyable. It acts as a harmonizer of other condiments and develops the natural, appetizing flavors of the foods.

Sweetness is nature's perfect flavor. It is also the cheapest nutriment that comes to the table. Remember cakes and cookies, ice creams, candies or stewed fruits for dessert. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with sugar. The Sugar Institute, 129 Front Street, New York.

'Gay Divorcee' Is Dry Spy; Shuts Up Reno

Reno, Nev., May 27 (AP)—Night clubs and roadhouses in and about Reno were in turmoil today, awaiting the outcome of a prohibition drive staged by a young woman who ostensibly came here to get a divorce and who turned out to be a "contract informer" for the government.

The woman arrived recently and became known in the divorce colony as Billie Rivers. She filed suit against Dewey Rivers and obtained a decree two weeks ago. She visited most of the night clubs and roadhouses, some of which have become widely known because of their attraction to those here for "the cure," as divorce action is called.

Billie Rivers obtained entree to the various places by appearing as a divorce seeker. The night clubs and roadhouses are represented as Reno's facilities for making life as lively as possible for those who come her to establish residence.

The young brunette married Stanley King of Los Angeles several days ago. The next day she went to Carson City and testified before a federal grand jury.

Results began to be forthcoming Saturday, when it became known 21 persons had been arrested as the result of 37 indictments against proprietors of the clubs and wayside inns. All the indictments charged violation of prohibition.

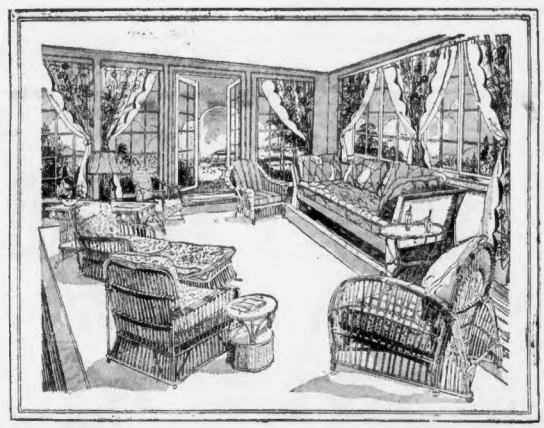
SUNROOMS

in the spirit of today — a PAINE forte



EVERY home has or is going to have a sunroom. But just any kind isn't enough. A sunroom where satisfaction springs like hope "eternal in the human breast" must bring into the home the freedom and exhilaration of outdoor living. Sunrooms are a Paine penchant. From the first we have watched their rise with more than interest. And we have evolved a technique of our own in furnishing them. As a necessary link in carrying out our ideas we have perforce gathered a coterie of sunroom furniture that is, to say the least, refreshingly original. So much so that we think no one can afford to "do" a sunroom without reconnoitering here.

In the Sunroom sketched

green and orange are the dominant color notes

The North Shore Couch—which should be a "must" in every well-appointed sunroom—is painted putty color and cushioned in dull red and tan-toned Rodier fabric, $205. "DEBS" TO AID CAMBRIDGE NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE FETE

It Will Be Staged on Longfellow Estate Lawn June 7

SOCIETY'S FAIREST FLOWERS will decorate the Longfellow fete to be given for the benefit of the Cambridge Neighborhood House on Friday, June 7, from 2:30 to midnight. Not only will a number of this year's debutantes grace the spacious lawns of the Longfellow estate as waitresses at the supper but the future buds will be on hand also for the afternoon tea servings. This settlement house, established by Mrs. Quincy Adams Shaw before Hull House or Trinity in London, is said to be the oldest neighborhood house in the country.

WITH MRS. CHARLES ALMY in charge one is assured of a fete with a difference, for Mrs. Almy stamps her parties with a certain individuality that intrigues universal interest in whatever she superintends. On the velvety lawn will gather practically everyone in Cambridge to see the dramatization of the children of Longfellow's poems, done by children from the Academy of Dramatic Arts. Folk songs and dances by children in native costumes from the Neighborhood House will be another feature. Fortune telling, "grabs," ice cream and Punch and Judy, candy, flowers, portraits and balloons—each play their part toward benefitting this settlement house.

THE LARGE BEVY OF ATTRACTIVE "waitresses" in charge of Miss Margaret Ford includes Miss Anne Robbins, Miss Anna Walcott, Miss Penelope Perry, Miss Carolyn Read, Miss Gertrude Mereau, Miss Carol Smith, Miss Elizabeth Goodridge, Miss Helen Nichols, Miss Rosamond Gardner, Miss Georgina Denton, Miss Mary Young, Miss Elinor Hopkinson, Miss Barbara Birkoff. Also these younger girls will assist: Miss Caroline Ford, Miss Elizabeth Hale and Miss Margaret Bouton. Mrs. James Ford is chairman of the supper committee.

MRS. ALMY IS BEING ASSISTED in working for the fete by Mrs. Endicott Mereau, Mrs. Charles Almy, Jr., Mrs. Murray P. Corse, in charge of fortunes; Miss Eleanor Abbott, in charge of portraits, Misses Carolins and Jane Read, Miss Gladys Smythe, the "cashier"; Mrs. Richard Hall, in charge of the show, Punch and Judy; also by Mrs. H. W. Dwight, soft drinks; Mrs. Robert Bradford, flowers; Miss Martha Taylor, ice cream; Mrs. W. D. Swan, candy, and Mrs. Hamilton Baker, grabs. Mrs. Paul Gring is in charge of the tea.

TOGGED OUT IN THEIR prettiest party frocks, scores of the children of Boston society people will gather in Filene's restaurant tomorrow afternoon for a tea party to benefit the Children's Hospital Transportation Fund. Did you ever hear anything more charming? Scarcely out of their nurseries, many of these favored darlings of fortune are thrilled with the prospect of "teaing in aid of my favorite charity," in exact imitation of mother's tone, if you please. Mrs. Carroll J. Swan of Brookline is one of the group working for this party and little Marjorie Nichols, daughter of the mayor, is to provide part of the entertainment with a dance.

WEDDING BELLS ARE TO ring for Miss Josephine Rotch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch of Commonwealth ave., in the Congregational Church at Old Lyme, Ct., on June 21, in one of the important society events of next month. On that date Miss Rotch and Albert S. Bigelow of Brookline are to be united by Dr. William Adams of New York and the Rev. W. D. Hoag of Lyme, at high noon. Miss Lydia Rotch, a sister of the bride-elect, is to be her maid of honor and Mrs. Robert M. Downs of Philadelphia her matron of honor. Her ten bridesmaids are Misses Gladys Bigelow, sister of the bridegroom, Margaret Barker, Baltimore; Margaret Lee Burgess, New York; Alice Graves, Boston; Elizabeth Houck, Westport, Ct.; Mary S. Hammon, Baltimore; Judith Kelly, Boston; Constance Sullivan, Sally Thatcher and Clarissa Wardwell of New York. Mr. Hugh Bigelow will be best man. The reception will be held at the home of the bride's maternal aunt, Miss Katherine Ludington, near the church.

Miss Carolyn Read, who will be one of many attractive "waitresses" at the Longfellow estate fete June 7 for the benefit of Cambridge Neighborhood House.

GRADUATES OF MISS MAY'S school had a glimpse of gay debutante parties just ahead for them when the entire class was entertained at a pre-dance luncheon and lawn party given by Miss Betty Bird at her Framingham home Saturday. Miss Bird is a member of the class, who will be presented to society this summer, and she entertained with a lavish hand. The party then assembled for tea at the Dover country home of Miss Charlotte Hopkinson, another bud soon to have her coming out party. Six future debs got their training as ushers, (such as they will have in plenty in the Junior League next winter) at the annual dance of the May school that evening. They were Miss Charlotte Cosby, Miss Rosamond Holton, Miss Edith Mitton, Miss Marion Duane, Miss Carolyn Day and Miss Constance Young.

And They Come Back

for another bottle! I dropped in to the Hairlene Laboratories, 8 Winter St., today. Anne, just as a smartly dressed woman was leaving with her second bottle of Hairlene. She confided to me that the first bottle of this universal scalp tonic produced such amazing results that she wouldn't be without it. It is so pleasant to use, too, and doesn't leave the hair a bit sticky, but rather gives it life and lustre. It corrects scalp irritations, dandruff, oiliness or dryness, and starts the hair growing. It contains no alcohol. You may order by mail. Price $1.00.

I've Lost My Heart, Anne,

to some new undies I found in Filene's today. Honestly, I tried just to admire them, and pass resolutely on, but they actually seemed to tease me to come back—and look again. So what could I do? It is a very special sale, and the prices are so temptingly modest that I am quite proud of my weakness. They are an excellent quality rayon—that lovable, tubable material that demands no ironing, and they come in fascinating shades of pink, peach and orchid. They are trimmed with appliques of sun-spots in harmonizing hues, or with very saucy chevrons. You can assemble a complete set (vest, panty and bandeau) for only $2.25. Singly, the pertest of panties, briefs and bloomers boast a price tag of only $1. Vests loudly acclaim their importance with a price tag that reads—75 cents. Bandeaus, designed on the new uplift lines are quite lofty values with their tag of 50 cents. So if you and your budget are faced with the problem of Shower or Graduation gifts, be sure you visit Filene's Underwear Section (street floor), today. You'll sigh and smile—and buy!

—And How Does Your Garden Grow?

I never did believe in that story of "silver bells and cockle shells." Did you, Anne? I much prefer a garden of cool, spicy evergreens and sweet-scented flowers, like R. H. White Company has in their wonderful Garden Home.

Do you know that all those heavenly blossoms that bank the mellow brick wall which surrounds the garden are real, growing shrubs, and they are there just to show you how you can glorify your home with plants and flowers. You can buy them there, too—at surprisingly low prices. Rhododendrons, with their huge, deep-hued blossoms, are $3 a plant; Flaming Azalea, $2.50; sturdy Austrian Pine, $2; Arbor Vitae, for your close-cropped hedge, $1.50 to $3, and Scotch Pine to flank your doorway, $2 and $3. Syringa, with its trailing mock orange blossoms; Golden Bell Forsythia, the yellow banner of Spring; Spirea, with its graceful, white drooping flowers, and Hydranges—massive plumes of white and pink that shade to russet in the Fall, are among the most popular in White's Garden Home—a Shrine of Shrubs where you can make your selection under the guidance of an experienced garden man.

The Last Long Curler!

A friend of mine who was looking forward to having her permanent with some slight uneasiness told afterward that she never knew a method could be so comfortable, nor that operators could be so gentle and efficient as at Houghton & Dutton Co.'s Beauty Parlor! Her wave is beautiful—soft and lustrous, and cost but $10, including shampoo and setting wave. They also do exceptional hair dyeing with Ineeto Notox, the most scientific dye that does not cover only the surface, but penetrates coloring from the inside. Smart bobbing, two barbers, 50 cents.

INACTION UPON LIGHTING BILL HALTS SENATE

The continued failure of the Senate Ways and Means Committee to report out the Municipal lighting bill today brought the business of the upper branch of the Legislature virtually to a standstill. For the first time in the session the Senate was without a calendar.

The Senate committee, of which the chairman is Senator Clarence P. Kidder of Cambridge, has had this bill, which passed the House unanimously, before it, for two weeks. During this time the powerful lighting interests have been exerting pressure to have the bill either reported unfavorably or amended in such a way as to make it quite harmless to them.

At a two-hour executive session today the committee had before it a written communication from Chairman Henry C. Attwill of the Public Utilities Commission. It is understood that Attwill again recorded himself against any weakening of the measure which he wants to help in checking exhorbitant rates charged by greedy private lighting companies to Massachusetts consumers.

At the conclusion of today's executive session the lobbyist of the lighting companies, as usual, was furnished with first hand information on the bill's progress, from committee members.

The committee announced that another executive session would be held later in the day.

Mercury Dolls Up

Here's the niftiest thing in messenger boy uniforms Boston ever saw. Angelo Cataruzolo shows how the Postal Telegraph and Cable Co boys look in their new "unies"—which the companies provide. They make even a State cop envious.

Bostonians rubbed their eyes today and hastily grabbed the daily papers to see what new army had invaded the city. But it turned out that the "army" was made up of Postal Telegraph messengers attired in their snappy new uniforms.

The uniform consists of blouse and breeches of navy blue with red stripes on the sleeve cuff and down the breeches leg. The cap looks like the Italian Army headgear with the Postal Telegraph shield. A black belt, black puttees and black shoes complete the ensemble. Blue shirts and black bow ties are also part of the outfit. All uniforms, shoes and shirts are supplied to the messengers free of charge. Raincoats and rubber hats will be supplied them in stormy weather.

The new uniforms will be supplied eventually to all the messengers in the employ of the Postal Telegraph company of which Clarence Mackay, father-in-law of Irving Berlin, is president.

The messengers are proud of their new uniforms, and doubly happy because they do not have to pay for them as they did for the old outfits.

PRESBYTERIANS VIEW 'LAWLESS ERA' AS CRISIS

St. Paul, Minn., May 27—A crisis in enforcement of state and national laws is indicated in the message delivered today to the 141th general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America by one of its principal committees.

To assist in bringing "proper respect for law," the administrative committee recommended an elaborate plan of action, including creation of a special commission, but specifically stated its intention was to maintain distinct separation of the functions of church and state and to make its influence felt morally rather than legislatively.

"While the church ought at all times to give the government its moral support, that duty instantly becomes more peremptory and exacting in a time of crisis," the committee, which then referred to the address of President Hoover at the Associated Press luncheon in April.

Mrs. Tunney Still Shows Improvement

Berlin, May 27 (INS)—Prof. A. W. Meyer, German specialist who was summoned to Brioni after Mrs. Gene Tunney suffered a relapse last week, sent word today to his colleague, Prof. Fritz Meyer, that Mrs. Tunney is improving.

Prof. Meyer performed the intestinal operation upon Mrs. Tunney at Brioni some weeks ago. When Mrs. Tunney suffered a setback Tunney telegraphed to Prof. Meyer to return.

Ludendorff May Seal Wife's Love Secrets

Berlin, May 27 (AP)—Gen. Erich Ludendorff, Germany's war-time quartermaster general, said today he would seek an injunction against the Munich publishing house, Drei Masken, which is contemplating publication of "When I Was Ludendorff's Wife," purporting to be the memoirs of his first wife, Frau Margarethe Ludendorff.

"The book presents a wholly untrue picture of my first marriage," Ludendorf declared.

Installments of the book have been published in German newspapers and are highly complimentary to the former officer of the Kaiser.

Ludendorff and Frau Margarethe were divorced July 9, 1926, the decree stating tersely both were to blame. He charged she smoked cigarettes excessively.

Ludendorff later remarried. He was Frau Margarethe's second husband, their marriage taking place just before the World War.

$100-a-Week Wife Not Yet Reconciled

Robert Raymond Elliott of Somerville, Harvard graduate, and Mrs. Mildred Howard Elliott of 1 Langdon st., Cambridge, whose proposed reconciliation after two years of separate existence would cause her to lose $100 a week under a will of an aunt, spent the week-end far apart.

Whatever plans the couple have made since Mrs. Elliott announced that she would give up her inheritance if her husband would return to her, they are not discussing.

Adams Finds Boston Navy Yard Cramped

Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy, who is at his Commonwealth ave. home for a few days on personal business, characterized as "cramped" the conditions at the Boston navy yard.

"In the event that the Boston yard should be called upon to build a cruiser there would have to be extensive alterations," he said.

"Some time soon a certain number of destroyers will be brought here—just how many or which ones I cannot say, nor just when they will come. But the den is to keep the load as even as possible."

A SIX-DAY NOVEL

Thrilling Six-Day Novel by a Noted Author

CHAPTER I.

TOWARD evening the corner where she worked filled up quickly with soft dusk.

Twilight flowing about her like an artist's brush, painting her hands very slender, very white.

Little Marie Karey, glancing up suddenly over a last envelope on a pile beneath her desk light, would smile into the gray at her dear, dear chum, Ione Farr.

Little Marie was all mahogany and pink; red-brown hair and eyes; sea-shell tints in her skin.

Ione laughed again, happily. Her first job this was. She had been here only a month. Marie, who also lived up in Lyall on the last shore of the Hudson, and had worked here a year, had brought her in one morning. And they had let her stay.

A music house, the Weimar Publishing Company—greatest in all New York, perhaps. And all of them so kind in spite of the mistakes she made!

Mr. Benz, the big, genial fellow they called "Eddie," always was telling her that.

Even "Papa" Weimar—famous old Max Weimar himself—turned his eyes her way sometimes as he went trundling through the outer office.

Maria told Ione at lunch that she and Palmer Elliott were to be married next month.

They were both going to keep on with their work.

"And successful," Marie ran on. "Oh, my, yes! Think of your sister, Jenepher. Home, family, wonderful career—what hasn't she, anyway?"

A tall boy was standing by the table.

"Ah, he—ah!" Marie fluttered, but on a high, triumphant air. "Ione—well, it's Mr. Alan Blake!"

He took her hand with a jaunty look; pressed her fingers together, leaning down and laughing all the while.

"Better practice saying 'Lanny two or three hundred times. Nice word with an easy sound, very nonirritating to the vocal cords if used persistently—a trial will convince you. Always efficacious—improves with use." He broke off, sent her a pleased, inquiring glance.

"Well—" She put her hand up,

The Curious Quizzer

THE QUESTION

Do you think the strength tests in Civil Service examinations should be dropped or modified?

EDWARD W. KENNEALY, Cross st.—In nearly all cases the civil service examiners should make applicants pass in strength tests where their services call for aiding the general public. For police and fire departments no man should be given a position unless he has qualified in a test for strength. I don't believe that the examiners with a competent physician present are going to require anything superhuman in a man's physical condition when he is otherwise qualified for the job for which he is looking.

ELI B. HILL, Webster st.—Strength tests should not be dropped nor modified by civil service examiners. To keep the tests reasonably stiff as I suppose they are at present is a good thing. Civil service lays down certain laws among which are tests for physical health and strength. Applicants for positions as firemen and policemen should not look for exemption from any of the requirements.

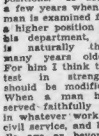
MISS JENNIE LANGONE, Austin st.—For the younger men I think the strength tests should be a part of the examination for civil service positions. If after a few years when a man is examined for a higher position in his department, he is naturally that many years older. For him I think the test in strength should be modified. When a man has served faithfully and intelligently in whatever work he got through civil service, and has reached middle age or beyond, I think the strength test should be entirely eliminated.

• • •



MISS MARION FEAT, Sewell st.—For live young men under civil service rules strength should be made one of the qualifications for holding their jobs. If exercises are practiced every day the younger men will find little difficulty in passing the tests required when they look for promotions. The older men who have had experience should not be compelled to pass the same physical tests as those younger, and I think the examination should be modified in their cases.

WIFE PINS HER SUIT FOR DIVORCE ON HAIRPIN

SELF-MADE MEN HAVE LED LYNN, STATE SHOE CITY, TO PROSPERITY

LYNN HAS SHOES APLENTY, BUT VERY FEW BOOTLEGGERS

By HARRY A. BENWELL

Horatio Alger, were he alive today, would find abundant material for his Rags to Riches stories in Lynn.

The "Shoe City," in addition to its other claims to fame, is peculiarly endowed with citizens who have worked their way up the ladder of success, rung by rung.

Take for instance Ralph S. Bauer, militant mayor of the city, and one of its heavy taxpayers. Born on January 31, 1867, son of the principal of a Provincetown grammar school, he became a wage earner at the age of seven on the death of his father. It was at that time Ralph Bauer started his life work, selling papers, and, we might add, he has done right well at it.

It would make a better narrative if we could say the boy started peddling papers in Lynn, but the truth is he began in Philadelphia, possibly with a desire to emulate Benjamin Franklin.

However that may have been, a short time later saw him in Boston, where in the winter he disposed of his wares on Tremont st., near Winter st., and in summer at Rowe's Wharf.

IN "TOUGH" DISTRICT

Then the family moved to the South End, to what was then known as Sweat st., characterized by the mayor as "the toughest spot in Boston." It was diagonally opposite a saloon which was the rendezvous for stickup men, pickpockets and crooks of all kinds, and was selected solely because rents were extremely low.

Mayor Bauer first became active in civic affairs when, as a member of the old Lynn Board of Trade, he directed attention to the ocean front and convinced the public it should be publicly owned. This resulted in Lynn Beach being admitted to the Metropolitan district.

ANOTHER HUSTLER

Then there is Eugene B. Fraser, treasurer of the Lynn Gas & Electric Light Co., member of the governor's council, treasurer of the Lynn Community Fund, president of the Lynn Baseball Club of the New England League and treasurer of the league. A self-made man of the finest type, whose recreation is baseball and whose hobby is helping others.

Born February 19, 1869, in the Shoe City, he has lived there ever since and is one of its most earnest and lustiest boosters. He was forced to go to work at 14, entering the employ of a local grocer. Two years later he became connected with the First National Bank of Lynn as a messenger, and worked up through the various branches until he became teller in 1900. The following year he accepted the position of treasurer of the Lynn Gas & Electric Light Co., and for 28 years has handled the financial affairs of that public utility.

Fraser was a close friend of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and always handled his campaigns in Lynn.

Another Lynnite who began work at an early age and raised himself to a position of prominence, is Fire Chief Edward E. Chase. He started out on the seat of an ice wagon at the age of 13, and remained in the business 35 years, acting as a call fireman at the same time. To be sure, he was in business with his father and three brothers, under the name of Z. J. Chase & Sons, but the rugged old fire fighter—he is 67—insists he had to work just as hard as if he had been employed by strangers.

Chief Chase joined the fire department as a substitute March 8, 1885, on Engine 2, and was appointed a regular call man March 10, 1888. On March 12, 1897, he was made a call captain, serving eight years, until the position was abolished.

83 YEARS YOUNG

On December 13, 1912, he was appointed chief of the Lynn fire department and has held the position since.

No mention of Lynn would be complete without reference to one of the city's institutions, Thomas M. Burckes, the 83-year-old chief of the police department, who has held that office for 32 years. Chief Burckes' grandfather, Lieut. Martin Burckes of the U. S. Navy, who fought in the War of 1812, lived to be 98, and the head of the police department insists he will break that record.

Despite his years he is at his desk seven days a week, never taking a day off, and as an official of the local G. A. R. post, leads the Memorial Day parade as chief marshal each year. And he covers the entire route on foot.

Salem is the subject of tomorrow.

Gen. Logan to Speak at Elks' Memorial

The Boston Lodge of Elks will hold its annual memorial services on Memorial Day, May 30, at Mt. Hope Cemetery, at 2:30 p. m. The ritual will be performed by Thomas F. Lockney, exalted ruler, and other officers of the lodge.

Maj. Gen. Edward L. Logan, a member of Boston lodge, will deliver the memorial address. Musical selections will be rendered by the Elks glee club and the Elks brass quartet. Joseph Eeler, baritone, will sing several solos. John J. Caulfield is chairman of committee of arrangements.

BOY DIVES FOR BODY OF MUTE

Richard M. McCormick, 20-year-old deaf mute of Warren pl., Roxbury, was drowned despite heroic efforts to save his life, and Duncan Gillis, 13, of Redland rd., West Roxbury, barely escaped a similar fate when their canoe overturned in the Charles River near the Brookline pumping station at West Roxbury.

The upset occurred when the boys tried to change seats in the canoe.

Eugene M. McSweeney, Jr., 16-year-old Jamaica Plain high school senior, living in Chilton rd., West Roxbury, was paddling on the other side of the river at the time, witnessed the upset and was the first to reach the scene of the capsizing.

McCormick sank at once, rose to the surface and disappeared. Gillis clung to the overturned canoe a minute and then started swimming ashore.

Realizing that Gillis would be picked up by Herbert Daley of Montvale st. and Gerald Griffin of Colberg ave., Roslindale, who were rapidly nearing the swimming youth in their own canoe, McSweeney chose to go after McCormick.

Minus only his shoes and coat, he dove. The water at the spot is 20 feet in depth over a mud bottom. He could not find McCormick on the first plunge and for five minutes he dove repeatedly.

In the meantime William A. Remick of School st., Jamaica Plain, had paddled to the spot and joined McSweeney in diving for McCormick. Both left the water exhausted only after it was apparent all efforts to locate the body, which was hidden in the mud, were futile.

Gillis was pulled to safety by Daley and Griffin and was little the worse for his experience.

Police continued today to drag for McCormick's body.

Mayors' Night at Hub's Irish Fair

As a special added attraction at the mammoth Irish fair, in Boston Garden tonight, supplementing the great show of more than 50 attractions, "Mayors' Night" will be observed.

Hairpins, a dainty kerchief, sidecombs and a woman's photograph figured in the testimony of Mrs. Pearl I. Smith of Hancock st., Everett, who sought divorce before Judge Bean today in Middlesex Probate Court from Robert A. Smith. Mrs. Smith charges desertion.

"We were happy until April, 1925, when my husband began to stay out six nights a week, she testified. "He would remain away from home every night until from 1:30 to 5 a. m. A friend of his owned an automobile, which he lent to my husband. I found hairpins, a lady's kerchief and sidecombs in the car.

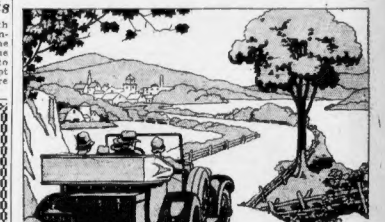
"The final break between us came on February 7, 1926. He returned home later. After he had gone to bed I searched his pockets and found a woman's photograph." He missed the picture next morning, accused me of taking it and flew into a rage. I became frightened and went to my mothers with my two children, Dorothy, five, and Mabel, three.

"Six months later I went to my husband and asked him to start anew with me, but he refused, saying, 'No, I am now doing just as I want to and I intend to keep on doing so.'"

The case was taken under advisement.

Ground Broken for Hospital Annex

George P. Gardner, president of the Children's Hospital, Longwood ave., today turned the first shovel of earth at the ground-breaking ceremony on the site of the proposed Gardner House, the nurses' school and home. Addresses were made by Mr. Gardner, George von L. Meyer, chairman of the building committee, and Miss Stella Goodrich, director of the school of nursing. Several hundred persons were present.



The Open Road

Everywhere in New England the open road calls to a world on wheels.

Checkered concrete climbs the hills to glorious views beyond. Black macadam threads shadowy arches of gothic elms. Ribbons of crunchy gravel wind along New England's singing streams.

A vacation land. It beckons the wayfarer on and on.

Nor need one be wholly vagabond to answer the call.

Alongside New England's motor highways run the copper highways of speech. At every cross-road the Blue Bell invites to talk with home.

Telephone service in New England is so swift, so sure, so reasonable in cost, that one need never lose touch with business, family, or friends, however far afield.

Rawson Will Try to Kayo Smith in Arena Go Tonight

DIAMOND BATTLES PARKER

Star Local Featherweights Clash in Special 10-Round Semifinal

By JACK CONWAY

BIG BOY RAWSON, latest knockout sensation, will attempt to climb higher on the pugilistic ladder when he releases his TNT punches in the direction of Ralph Smith of Los Angeles in a 10-round bout at the New Boston Arena tonight, under the direction of the Arena A. C.

Rawson is the most terrific hitter to come to the front in the heavyweight division during the past decade.

Jack Conway

Max Schmeling German heavyweight, is rated high as a kayo king, but it took him eight rounds to stop Joe Monte, while Big Boy performed this feat in a single chapter.

There isn't anything finished or polished about Rawson's fighting style. He holds his hands low, which violates all of the rules of boxing. He takes parades to within range of his opponent and blazes away with both hands.

The secret of Rawson's success is that he punches straight as well as with deadly force. His socks have not any loop to them and so they are more difficult to avoid.

It was a straight left hook which started Monte out of the picture. A right hander finished the job.

RAWSON will be opposed by a finished campaigner in Smith. The latter has engaged in bouts in all parts of the country against some of the best of the big fellows.

At New Orleans in January Smith gave Young Stribling a scare. Ma's boy was matched to tackle Jack Sharkey at Miami Beach and took on Smith in a sort of warm-up affair.

Stribling didn't find it as easy to tip over Smith as he thought it would be. In the eighth round, Smith was still in there.

Martin Burke, one of Stribling's sparring partners, was promoter of the show. This may have had something to do with the referee coming to Stribling's rescue in the eighth round and stopping the tussle.

The crowd booed the official finding.

In view of the fact he has won 15 out of his last 16 bouts by knockouts, Rawson will go to the post a favorite tonight.

CHARLEY PARKER of the South End and Hy Diamond, the Jewel of the West End, will share the limelight with Rawson and Smith.

PRINCIPALS IN ARENA TILTS

Ralph Smith (left), California husky, promises to do his best to upset Big Boy Rawson (right) in the 10-round feature battle at the new Boston Arena tonight. Rawson, on the other hand, expects to score a knockout. In center is Hy Diamond, who meets Charlie Parker (in circle below) in another merry muss.

Sonny and Plestina in Title Battle

The most savage wrestling match in the history of Boston is expected to be staged tomorrow night in the Arena, when Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight champion of the world, will defend his title against huge Marin Plestina, the gigantic trust buster.

Plestina will have every physical advantage over Sonnenberg. He weighs 239 pounds, in comparison with 195 for Sonnenberg. He stands 6 feet 4 inches in height, as compared with 5 feet 8 inches for Sonnenberg. And he is known all over the country as the man whom Caddock, Lewis and the Zbyszkos refused to meet.

The trust buster has been itching for a shot at the heavyweight title for years, but no other champion, it seems, has had quite the courage, quite the reckless daring of Sonnenberg. He wants to batter down the whole field of contenders. When a hostile head appears he believes in lopping it off.

SONNY DOWN FINE

Sonnenberg, drawn fine by steady traveling, has no man. His crown is on his head at a cocky angle, and one by one all the greatest wrestlers in the world are having their shot at it. No one, however, has yet solved his booming flying tackle, and no one has been able to pin the shoulders of the tough, wiry champion to the mat.

Plestina seems to have the best chance of all the wrestling brigade. His strength is so tremendous that 200-pounders are mere babes in arms. Last week, he simply overwhelmed Freddy Meyers, Sam Sworsky, and Andy Brown at the Arena, in less than nine minutes, and he threatens to engulf the fiery, fighting champion in the same way.

The trust buster still rules a slight favorite over the champion, but the bulky little champion has a legion of backers who are ready to back him not only with their voices but also with their cash. Undoubtedly more money is bet and will be bet on this bout than on any other wrestling match ever held in Boston with the exception of the second Lewis-Sonnenberg match.

Both Plestina and Sonnenberg wound up their training grind yesterday, and neither one will do any training work today.

The advance sale is tremendous, but thousands of choice seats are still available, and it was announced that Paul Bowser's office, 115 Chauncey st., room 203, will be kept open until nine o'clock tonight to distribute tickets.

STRONG PRELIM CARD

The main bout will be preceded by the strongest preliminary bill of the year. Dan Koloff, Balkan champion, will be paired with Stanley Pinto, Bohemian champion; Former Joe Wagner, latest Providence sensation, with Andy Brown of New York; John Spellman, former Brown College football star with Wladek Zbyszko, former heavyweight champion of the world; Freddie Meyers of Chicago with Farmer George McLeod; and Charlie Hanson of Sweden with Jack Ganson of South Boston.

Irish Envoy To Attend Hub Races

Augustus F. Goodwin, president of the Eastern Horse Club announced today that Michael McWhite, Irish Free State minister to the U. S., had accepted an invitation to visit here on June 30th to attend the annual races of the Eastern Horse Club, to be held at Clyde Park, The Country Club, Brookline.

Woburn Juveniles took the game and full points from the Lunt-ania Recreation Juveniles at Blake Field, winning in the second half on a goal by Abrew.

FUGAZY LOSES DEMPSEY AS PARTNER

New York, May 27 (AP)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, severed relations today with Humbert J. Fugazy, New York promoter, and announced he would promote boxing matches in conjunction with the Coliseum in Chicago, starting next fall.

Dempsey said his contract with Fugazy, entered into March 25, automatically expired last Saturday upon the promoter's failure to provide him with an outdoor arena where outstanding matches could be staged in New York. In the two months Dempsey has been in partnership with Fugazy, he failed to arrange a single bout.

The former champion said his agreement with the Chicago Colliseum, where Jim Mullen is the boxing promoter, calls for the staging of bouts there every two weeks during the fall and winter.

At the same time, Dempsey said he would continue personal efforts to acquire both indoor and outdoor arenas in New York.

Fugazy's signing with Dempsey as a partner in the promotion of major fistic shows was built on the belief that the combine could lease the polo grounds, home of the New York Giants, for outdoor shows, Dempsey said. The Madison Square Garden Corporation, headed by William F. Carey, not only rented the polo grounds for the summer, but tied up the Yankee Stadium, as well.

Dempsey stressed the fact that he had no personal differences with Fugazy and was merely following out the provisions of his contract with the Garden's chief promotional rival here. He said his new plans did not include any ring comeback on his part.

Fugazy, surprised when informed of Dempsey's statement by the Associated Press, said he "didn't know a thing about it."

"It can't be," the promoter said. "Dempsey's contract with me can't expire. There are provisions in the agreement, but the time limit is set at June 1."

Dempsey said Fugazy would be informed of his action by his lawyers.

32 COLLEGES IN 4-A GAMES

Philadelphia, May 27—After months of preparation a small army of college athletes, trained to the ultimate degree in wind and muscle, are ready for the 33d annual I. C. A. A. A. A. track and field championships, to be held on Franklin Field Friday and Saturday afternoons.

Thirty-two colleges with a total of 407 entries will compete during the two days for the honor of being called champion. From far off Los Angeles, Palo Alto and Berkeley, Cal., squads of runners and jumpers are speeding for this city in their quest for titular honors.

One of the three coast teams, Stanford University, rules the favorite among those who are conversant with intercollegiate athletics. Twenty-three athletes trained by Dink Templeton will attempt to make it three in a row over the effete East.

Progressives Play Riverside Tonight

The Magoun Square Progressives of Somerville, one of the best teams turned out in that city in recent years, will meet the fast Riverside A. C. of Everett at the Richard Trum Playground tomorrow evening. The Magoun sq. boys showed their gameness in the game against the Hyde Park A. C., coming from behind and beating the visitors 7-5, in their first Sunday game. "Red" Conley will do the twirling, with Fred Wholley behind the bat for the Progressives.

MR. BOSTON By JACK CONWAY

"THERE is a strong feeling among wrestling fans that Gus Sonnenberg will lose his title as world's heavyweight champion when he battles Marin Plestina at the New Boston Arena tomorrow night," said Mr. Boston today. "It is felt," went on the veteran, "that Dynamite didn't exercise the best of judgment when he agreed to tackle the Trust Buster at this time.

"Plestina for years hounded Strangler Lewis, but the latter would never risk a meeting with him. Earl Caddock likewise avoided Marin. Joe Stecher, with a friendly referee on the job, tackled Plestina and considered himself fortunate when he got a draw.

"Hans Steinke only lasted 26 minutes with Plestina, while the average wrestler has not been able to stand up before Marin for 10 minutes.

"One must admire Sonnenberg's superb courage even though one may not approve of his judgment. Under ordinary conditions Sonnenberg would have at least an even chance of winning against Plestina.

"The present match, according to the folks who know there wrestling, was made at the wrong time. Since winning the championship from Lewis in January, Sonny has traveled more than 30,000 miles. He has taken on all kinds of opponents in every part of the country.

"'I haven't minded wrestling as much as I have traveling,' the champion told me. 'It is impossible to get proper rest in Pullmans. But I don't think I have gone stale. I may be down a little bit too fine, but I still have enough of a kick left in me to upset Plestina.'

"PAUL BOWSER, who is much the same in the wrestling game that the late Tex Rickard was in the boxing racket, apparently figures Plestina has an excellent chance of winning as he has secured an option on his services for future matches.

"Among other things Plestina signed a contract to meet Sonny in a return bout at an outdoor show here within 30 days in the event he becomes champion. Bowser has also provided for matches between Plestina and the other leading wrestlers.

"Bowser argues that if the title is to change hands he would rather have it go to Plestina than to anybody else. He feels the Trust Buster has enough confidence in his own ability to tackle the leading contenders. Such contests would arouse interest and would result in a substantial profit for Bowser as promoter.

"SONNENBERG has done a great deal to instill new interest into the wrestling game. He has attracted thousands of followers to the sport. Everybody is anxious to see the former Dartmouth football hero apply his famous flying tackle.

"I notice that in some of his recent matches Sonny has won by holds other than his flying tackle. He believes that if he relies on only one hold to toss an opponent that his career as champion will not be a long one.

"I LOOK for Sonny to return to his flying tackle tomorrow night. Although he won't admit it, he knows he has gone a little bit stale. He probably realizes he will have to make a tremendous effort to retain his championship. It is natural that he should return to his original style of wrestling.

"Up at Hanover Gus said that when everything else went wrong he could usually turn the tide of conflict in his favor by making a few determined flying tackles. Tomorrow night will give Gus' method a real test."

New England I. A. A. A. U. to Work With A.A.U.

Maj. Frank H. Briggs, the big man of the advisory committee of the New England Intercollegiate Athletic Association, has announced that the delegates to the annual convention voted to apply for allied membership in the Amateur Athletic Union, the articles of alliance to be the same as those now existing between the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. and the A. A. U.

Tech to Send Frosh to Poughkeepsie

New York, May 27 (AP)—Massachusets Institute of Technology has entered its freshman crew as well as its varsity in the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie June 24, it was announced today by Reynolds Benson of Columbia, secretary of the board of stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing association.

JAKE ZERAMBY AND BROWN AT LYNN

Jake Zeramby, one of the best of the New England crop of featherweights, will clash with Newport Johnny Brown in a 10-round bout at an open-air show at Lynn tonight.

The rival ring men have been in training for 10 days and each reports he is in the best possible condition for tonight's skirmish.

Zeramby's ring future will hang in the balance when he mingles with the hard hitting Brown as he is virtually matched to collide with Sammy Fuller in a bout for the New England featherweight championship at Fenway Park next month.

Zeramby and Brown will be supported by a strong preliminary card.

U. S. CUP TEAM TO PLAY CUBA

New York, May 27 (AP)—If all goes well the United States Davis Cup team this week will win the right to an ocean voyage to Europe in general and Paris in particular.

Having eliminated Canada and Japan in succession, the United States squad faces Cuba at Detroit, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, in the finals of American zone competition. A victory over the Cubans will entitle John Hennessey, John Van Ryn and their fellow team members to a trip to Paris to meet the winners of the European zone eliminations. Triumph in that series would give the United States its second chance in two years to regain the Davis Cup from the defending French.

Although the Cubans, Gustavo Vollmer, Ricardo Morales and Cuco Upmann, easily eliminated Mexico in their only previous test, they are not expected to do more than push Van Ryn and Hennessey in the final round. In 10 matches against Japan and Canada the United States dropped only one, Van Ryn failing before Yoshiro Ohta of Japan in a five-set battle.

Schoolboy Tourney Week's Leading Golf Feature

YALE VS. HARVARD THURSDAY

Schoolboys War in N. E. Title Tourney at Oakley on Friday and Saturday

By BILL GRIMES

OUTSTANDING among the golf tournaments for this week, is the interscholastic championship which will be held at the Oakley Country Club on Friday and Saturday.

Although the entries for the interscholastic did not come up to expectations, a fast field will compete for the first schoolboy championship offered in almost 20 years.

Joe Lynch, the former junior and caddy champion of the state, is a heavy favorite, but the Jamaica Plain high boy is going to encounter plenty of stiff opposition.

Bill Donnelly and Henri Bourneuf will represent Newton high and the former has been playing better golf than Lynch has been able to produce this season. John Quinn, who with George Ford, will carry the colors of Brookline high, should negotiate Oakley in the middle 70's, as should Wilfred Crossley of Dedham high.

Then there is John Slattery, a member of the Woodland football team, who will be the hope of Boston College high. If Long John is able to control his tee shots he will score well, otherwise not.

There will be a field of 105 schoolboys competing for the title and of this number almost half will be out-of-staters, hailing from Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

The New England Shoe and Leather Golf Association will stage its first tournament of the season at the Wollaston Golf Club tomorrow and according to advice from Chick Furber, a record breaking attendance is expected.

Around the shoe and leather boys are offering a very attractive list of prizes, and due to the fact that the association boasts of some fifteen players in the 80's, a hot fight will be the order of the day. On it will be an all-day affair as golf will be in action from early morning until dark.

In an event which will determine the championship of Massachusetts and Rhodeisland, an All-Providence team will play the Brae Burn Country Club, which recently won the Women's Golf Association of Boston team match championship, tomorrow morning at Brae Burn.

The Providence district has had four teams in action this spring and an all-star aggregation will come up from Little Rhody tomorrow hoping to upset the Boston district title holders.

The Oyster Harbor Club will stage its second invitation tournament of the season starting on Wednesday and running through Friday. This will be a mixed four some tourney and is expected to attract many of the low handicap players of both the M. G. A. and the W. G. A.

The Harvard and Yale teams are scheduled to play their annual team matches over the Rhode Island Country Club course on Memorial Day. Both universities are represented by far better than the average college teams, with the Crimson, due to such stars as Phil Pinlay, Eddie Murphy, Jim Baldwin and Bill Arnold, all of whom by the way, are sophomores, having a slight edge over the Bulldog

DEUTSCHER DEMPSEY IN TRAINING

Associated Press photo of Max Schmeling, who looks like Tiger Jack and fought like him, at least once, when he flattened Johnny Risko, Cleveland baker boy. Max is to be given the acid test in a bout with Paulino, iron man from the Pyrenees, in a 15-round bout at the Yankee Stadium, June 27. The camera caught Schmeling taking a high hurdle at his training quarters in Lakewood, N. J.

HARVARD NINE IN TRIO OF BATTLES

Encouraged by victories over Dartmouth and Brown on successive days last week end, the Harvard varsity baseball team this week will take on three stiff assignments, meeting Georgetown tomorrow at Soldiers Field and then journeying away for games at Providence against Brown Thursday, and Holy Cross at Worcester Saturday.

Georgetown, by virtue of a close game on Saturday with Holy Cross, when the strong Crusader team won only 2 to 1, promises to subject the Crimson to an acid test. Howie Whitmore is due to hurl for the Crimson, though Coach Mitchell's plans are still rather indefinite, five games within ten days having put rather of a strain on his system of rotating Red MacHale and Whitmore regularly.

The assumption is that Whitmore will hurl the first Holy Cross game at Worcester. In that case he could hardly be expected to face Brown on Thursday, nor would his services appear to be required. On the other hand, Georgetown is distinctly worthy of his steel, but Whitmore would have to face them with only four days' rest.

Ten Americans in British Golf Play

Tommy Burns Points Out Boxing Flaws

By FRANK G. MENKE

THE FLAW that Tommy Burns, old-time heavy champion, detects in the ringmen of today is

"Their stance is bad. Old-timers always were in position where they could punch or block without shifting their feet. Most of the boys today either leap in to hit or jump back to defend. They seem unable to do one or the other without readjusting themselves.

"If they go in to hit—well, hitting is the only thing on their mind. They aren't ready to block. Therefore, if the other fellow is the faster puncher they get nailed. If they are blocking a punch, that's the important thing in their life. They just haven't the knack of blocking with one hand, and hammering an opponent with the other.

"So they lose glorious opportunities to land punches and they take hundreds on the head or chin that they never need to take, if they had just learned the old timers' trick of hit-block or block-hit."

BULLY STARTS KAYO ON RING CAREER

Kayo Christner never had a thought of becoming a pug until he was 30. A bully gave him the idea.

Christner worked in the same rubber factory as the bully. The latter harassed, annoyed, browbeat and also beat up various folks. Seeking more worlds to conquer, he happened to notice Christner.

That was the bully's error.

Christner responded to the bully's sallies by all but busting him into fragments.

"Goodness us!" ejaculated Kayo's shopmates. "You're a socking kid. The way you busted up that guy why, say, you ought to make a try for the big time stuff."

"I'll think it over, said Christner. He did. As a result he went to a Y. M. C. A. and took a boxing course. Since then he has grown older and bolder, but he has made a name for himself, and about 10 times as much cash as he would have made the rest of his life if the bully hadn't crossed the pathways of his tranquility.

WHY "LOOIE" RETIRED

Maybe you've read why Luis Firpo POSITIVELY will not do a comeback. And maybe you haven't.

Anyway, it's a fairish sort of yarn.

"Looie" was training, quite seriously. And one afternoon he left the gym and hired a cab and rode to his destination.

"How much?" asked Firpo.

"Two pesos," said the cabby.

"Too much; one peso," snorted "Looie," flipping the cash at the cabby.

The cabby caught the money in transit, as "Looie" lumbered away. Then the cabby ran after Firpo and demanded one more peso.

"Scat!" said "Looie" in Spanish.

So the cabby, (not recognizing Firpo) picked up a flat, threw it forward and lit hit "Looie" on his whiskers.

"Down went the "Wild Bull!"

Naturally, a crowd gathered An Argentine cop arrived. The story has it that he hauled both boys to jail. The judge discharged them.

Firpo hasn't trained since.

LEONARD'S BULK

Benny Leonard, once the sleek 135-pound champion of the globe, now beams 168. This, of course is occasion for much razzing from his acquaintances.

"Just an all-done fat boy," they yodel.

But Leonard always has a come back card or two in his hand.

I'm no taller than Mickey Walker, who was welter champion when I was top sergeant among the lightweights. Mickey since has become middleweight champion, and has fought for the light heavyweight crown. Walker, no bigger than I am, weighs as much as I do. How come this fat boy business?"

KREIS DRIVES DURANT CAR IN BIG RACE

Indianapolis, Ind., May 27—Cliff Durant, multimillionaire sportsman and race driver who for years has been one of the most colorful performers in America's biggest races, has hung up his goggles.

At 38 years of age he retires, just before post time, and Peter Kreis, youthful veteran with steel nerves will ride Durant's car, which has been prepared by Tommy Milton, only two time winner of an Indianapolis event and himself retired, in the international 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Thursday, May 30.

"Time has taken its toll," declared Durant in announcing his decision. "With my mind occupied with more serious matters, I no longer feel the reckless abandon that I consider the requisite qualities of a driver at Indianapolis.

"Feeling that I could not give the car which Milton has prepared with built in cars the ride it deserves, I am going to hang up my goggles and helmet. It is difficult to do for I have been racing since 1914 and it is the first time I will admit that fast riding is a youngster's game.

Hands Must Work in Harmony, Says Golf Master

How to Hit With Heel (Not Back) of Hand Facing the Hole

By JOHNNY FARRELL

American Open Golf Champion

I WOULD like to direct attention to the most important matter of acquiring a proper grip on golf clubs. Here lies, I think, one of the principal reasons why so many are failing to show improvement.

The grip of the club has a whole lot to do with the true hit and I fear that many are so careless about the adjustment of their hands that they need to be pulled up short.

It would seem that the mere adoption of the overlapping or interlocking styles was all that they deem necessary. It hardly makes any difference what method is employed so long as the hands are brought closely and compactly together so that they can work in harmony.

The prevalent fault seems to be an inability to place the left hand in a true starting position. There is the tendency to hit more with the back of the hand instead of with the heel or left side. I need only tell you to take a hammer in hand and attempt to drive a nail while hitting with the back of the hand and you will readily grasp what I mean. When you hammer, it is natural for you to hit down on the hammer handle and you will not be able to see any of the fingers of the hand. Now this is exactly what should happen when you grip the golf club with your left hand.

THE hand should be brought far enough over the shaft as to hide the fingers, but not so far that you are able to see more than two knuckles. When you have the back of the hand facing the hole, you must shut the face of the club so much as to make it almost impossible to get the ball into the air. The power of the hit is also restricted. The other extreme is no less faulty than the other. By getting the hand too far over the shaft the wrist is brought over, too, and the club is certain to be brought down with its face pointing to the ground.

I would therefore advise all those players who are attempting to hit with the back of the hand to make the simple little adjustment and start hitting with the heel. I am sure that they will notice an almost immediate improvement.

What I have said about the left hand concerns in part the right. It is important to have the right hand neither too much over nor too far under the shaft. Getting the hand too much over the shaft not only cuts down power but is a primary cause for slicing.

Among the higher ranking players it seems the fault is exactly opposite. They are prone to get the hand too far under the shaft and are usually beset with a very bad case of hooking.

MAN players so place their hand for no other reason than to hook, in this manner getting a longer roll on the ball from the left to right spin imparted. But it is a bad habit to get themselves into for, in the long run, I think they will find that they are sacrificing control for more length.

Once the player has adopted the proper grip I advise him to stick to it and use it for all his shots. There are a few players who switch from one grip for the woods to another for the irons but I cannot see that they derive any advantage from it. I use the same grip on all my clubs excepting the putter.

Copyright, 1929, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

If your game is not showing improvement look to your "grip," advises Johnny Farrell, American open champion, illustrating above the Vardon overlapping-grip, which he employs so satisfactorily. At the left, the compactness of this grip is clearly shown. The picture was made with the club at the half-way position in the back swing. Note how the heel of the left palm hugs the club shaft, assuring power and direction. At the right, Farrell shows how the club shaft should lay in the fingers of the left hand. When closed around the shaft the back of the hand should be facing the line of direction. Then the right hand is brought into position far enough over so that the thumb and first finger form a V down the face of the club.

Red Sox Have Day Off; Then Must Battle Athletics

MACK'S TEAM SEEMS HEADED FLAGWARD

By NICK FLATLEY

THE Red Sox have a breathing spell today. The athletes can sleep, or movie, or do what they will, for there's no game scheduled. It's just a vacation before more woe arrives, for the Athletics get here tomorrow.

Connie Mack's league leaders play four games in three days—two on the holiday—and Connie's boys are going places this year. The shaky Carrigans will be lucky to win a game from the A's, who have the pennant notion and are playing accordingly this early in the campaign.

The Macks, a powerful, slugging ball club have jumped the champion Yanks and are all steamed up about getting themselves a title. They will be tough picking for a club as loose and uncertain as the Sox are just now.

BILL CARRIGAN'S Red Sox need plenty of shaking up before they can hope to get out of the cellar. The team cannot rise to opportunities. They did collect two out of five from the champion Yanks, but had they been alive they might have swept that series.

Ed Morris was rushed before a big Sunday crowd because the infielders were all wrong. Charlie Ruffing didn't have a chance in his game Saturday, after four inner defense slips had handed the hostiles as many runs.

A second division team has a chance any time it is tight defensively. But when it cannot back up good pitching, it's just about sunk. The Sox have spirit and fight. They try, perhaps too hard.

But they fall down in the tight spots, and unless they improve their pitchers all will be discouraged beyond hope of redemption.

"RUSS" SCARRITT, the tiny outfielder, is getting to be a Fenway hero. Bill has appeared in the last three games, and in each one has belted out a long hard triple. He seems to be the one player on club who may develop into a sure enough slugger.

A week ago he was no place on a big time team, and looking for a miracle in the Bugaboo case, has not helped the Sox much in the way of building.

THE A's linger around until the holiday double header goest into history. Then they are off for those modern off-days, ere the Cleveland Indians come here for the week-end festivities. The Sox entertain the entire west, after the Macks get out, and in that stand may start to win ball games.

For the Athletics are still the popular favorites, although their hold is slipping. Babe Ruth always filled the local park, but this year because the native teams figured to stop him.

BUT the Babe can't be stopped. His hitting was curbed Saturday, but his artistic steal offsets

Boston College and Georgetown, both nursing black eyes after a rather disastrous week-end, stage a consolation game at University Field this afternoon. The Eagles are expected to win.

B. C. was unceremoniously upset by Fordham in New York, 10 to 0. It was the first shutout of the campaign for B. C. and the worst beating the Heights nine has taken on the diamond in some seasons.

Georgetown was added to the list of Holy Cross victims at Pilton Field. But the Hilltoppers had nothing to be ashamed off after the game. They batted the pretty Purple nine in years, with Nekola on the hill, to a 2-1 game.

The Hilltoppers from the Capital City have already rung up one win over B. C. this spring. It happened in the South when O'Connor blew up, the Eagles started miscueing and Georgetown took full advantage to obtain a 7 to 6 decision.

SCHOOL TEAMS TO BE BUSY ALL WEEK

By DICK McSWEENEY

An extensive and varied program of scholastic sports greets the fan this week with track meets, baseball games, tennis and golf matches in more than usual number.

While baseball contests this week are important, the many fine track meets will occupy the sport spotlight.

Today, tomorrow and Wednesday, the Regimental and District track meets for the Boston schools are being held at Tech Field, Cambridge. These meets have the cream of Hub scholastic track talent vying for honors, and records seem sure to fall.

Today's program at Tech Field comprises the dashes, hurdles, and runs of the 13th annual outdoor meet of the district school and the 21st annual outdoor meet of the regimental meet of the Latin, Day and Trade high schools.

Tomorrow's sun will shine on the relay races and field events of the regimental division, and the finals of the district meet.

On Wednesday, the regimental athletes will put the finishing touches on their meet. The activities of the three days will begin at 3.30 each afternoon.

Just to prove that it is a big track week, the Brown interscholastic meet is being held at Providence.

Leading suburban schools will send teams to Little Rhody in an effort to grab a few honors before the spring track season ends.

Fitchburg will hold a State relay carnival on Saturday, and here will be found another group of the leading track teams in the State seeking honors.

The baseball teams will grip their bats and gloves a little tighter for the next few days. Some teams end their seasons on next Saturday.

Tufts freshmen at Dean Academy and Pinkerton Academy at Lawrence Academy contribute baseball conflicts today.

Things brighten a bit tomorrow when Boston English tries to take a fall out of B. C. high and the Catholic High school League nines get into action at their respective parks.

Bunioneers Visit Mexico

JOAN LOWELL MAKES MERRY WITH SHIP'S CREW

Scene aboard U. S. Government operated ship, showing passengers with headaches waiting for an opportunity to consult the ship's surgeon. The gentleman in the boots is demanding an aspirin tablet.

Schools are now being provided in several cities for what psychologists call "problem girls"—young women who don't like to work.

Gosh, a lot of us are married to "problem girls" and don't know it!

TRIALS AND TROUBLES OF A FREE SPIRIT

(Garden City, Mo., Views)

Saturday night Watchman Weldman caught our Liquor Problem hiding a jug of corn under a shed. He was arrested and taken to Pete Zimmerman's restaurant, where a crowd discussed what should be done with him. It was finally decided to call the sheriff. When that officer arrived Len went out to greet him, and while he was gone the Problem ran out the back door.

New York Stocks — News of Street

STOCKS SLUMP IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

By W. S. COUSENS.

New York, May 27—All roads in the stock market led to lower prices today. Extreme uneasiness over money supplies in the period prior to June 15, when close to $2,000,000 will be needed for Government and corporation financing, froze up the ordinary channels of buying demand for stocks, while the bears cracked the whip over the market in another savage onslaught on the active shares.

As if to allay the fright of small traders, the Reserve Board issued a rosy statement about general business and industrial conditions in the United States, pointing to $200,000,000 decrease in "loans on securities" in four weeks ended May 1.

A month or so ago might have stirred speculative enthusiasm to the boiling point, but conditions are different today.

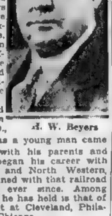
Many of the big bulls have been battered and cuffed into submission by the victorious bears. Pools have been wound up after paying heavy losses and the "new era" propaganda has long since ceased to work the wonders in speculative circles that were credited to it in the bull market of 1928.

Hardly had the tap of the opening gong sounded when the avalanche of selling opened out on the big board and stocks resumed their downward move. There were no favorites. All were swept down the stream of falling prices, as stocks poured out incessantly on a market unable to stand them.

General Electric dropped about $15 and Commercial Solvents around $17 a share. Allied Chemical, Borg Warner, Johns Manville, United Aircraft, Goodyear and Columbian Carbon at the same time were down $6 to $9 a share, while losses of $4 or more came in a number of active issues.

BEYERS IS MADE VICE CHIEF

Appointment of H. W. Beyers as vice-president in charge of traffic, Chicago and North Western Railway, effective June 1, is made public in an announcement by President Fred W. Sargent.



H. W. Beyers

Mr. Beyers, who succeeds A. C. Johnson, has had many years of executive railroad experience, having been a general officer of the Chicago and North Western since 1906.

Born and educated in Toledo, O., Mr. Beyers as a young man came to Chicago with his parents and afterwards began his career with the Chicago and North Western, having remained with that railroad continuously ever since. Among the positions he has held is that of general agent at Cleveland, Philadelphia and Chicago.

During the war, he acted as chairman of traffic section, committee of co-ordination of terminals. Upon the release of the railroads from federal control, he returned to the Chicago and North Western as freight traffic manager, which position he has held until his present promotion.

Mr. Beyers was one of the original organizers of the Traffic Club of Chicago, and is vice-president of the American Association of Freight Traffic Officers. He is a member of the Chicago Athletic Club, and Ohio Society of Illinois, and traffic clubs throughout the country.

Nat'l Plumbing Co. Opens $35,000 Bldg.

President A. I. Weiss and Treasurer C. Rosenwald were hosts to more than 400 manufacturers' representatives from various sections of the country at the dedication of the National Plumbing Supply Co.'s $35,000 fireproof building at 58 Geneva ave., Dorchester.

The building is used entirely for wholesale plumbing, heating and gas suplies and every modern facility for handling and shipping is utilized in the 10,000 square feet of space provided. The company still operates its large warehouse at Grove Hall.

Canada Best Buyer of U. S. Radios

Washington May 27 (AP)—Canada is buying almost half the current exports of radio receiving sets from the United States.

The Department of Commerce says that during February 3302 sets were sent to Canada, compared with a total to all countries of 8246.

Costa Rica, Panama, Barbados, Java, British Oceania and Morocco bought one set each from the United States during the month.

NEW ENGLAND KANE OFFERING ANNOUNCED

Flint & Co., Inc., New York, are offering 60,000 shares of the capital stock of The Kane Stores of New England, Inc., a corporation owning and operating a chain of retail furniture stores in New England cities.

The management of the present company is in the hands of the same group of New England men who opened the first Kane store in Woonsocket, R. I., in 1920. This first store was started with a capital of $38,000 and did a gross business of $125,000 the first year in operation. Chain store principles were shortly thereafter applied, with the result that, as the profits of the company warranted new stores were opened each year in strategic locations.

Today the Kane Stores of New England, Inc., operates eight stores in some of the largest New England cities. Its capitalization, in nine years, has increased to more than $1,700,000 with annual net sales running well over $1,000,000. The total net sales for the period of 1926 to 1928 inclusive were $3,241,995.62, or a yearly average of net sales of $1,080,665.20. Report for the quarter ending March 31, 1929, shows net sales of $241,447.21 as compared with $218,412.49 for the same three-month period of 1928, or an increase of slightly over 10 per cent.

The total net profits for the calendar years 1926, 1927 and 1928, after provision for interest, depreciation and federal taxes, and after giving effect to non-recurring items, were $364,645.36, or an average yearly net profit of $121,548.45. The company has shown a profit during every year of its existence, and for the past three years has paid stock and cash dividends.

The stores operated by the Kane Stores of New England are engaged in the retail furniture business under the modern Budget Plan. The Boston Store, located at 410 Washington st., is under the management of a local resident and employs an all Boston personnel. The chain of Kane stores is being expanded as rapidly as is consistent with sound growth. Having developed the formula for successful operation, the adding of additional stores is merely a problem of finding good locations at favorable terms of rental. Competent managers are constantly being developed, trained and prepared for these stores within the Kane personnel.

The stock of the Kane Stores of New England, Inc., has been listed on the securities market of the New York Produce Exchange. The present issue of 60,000 shares is being sold to provide capital for further development along constructive chain store principles, by opening additional stores in cities and towns in New England.

Cotton Is Higher in New York Dealings

New York, May 27 (INS)—Cotton was firm today at advances of 4 to 11 points. The opening price of July was 18.64c, October 18.52c, October (new) 18.59c, December 18.68c, January 18.68c and March 18.80c.

Radio Corp. Gives License to CeCo

EXCESS CROP OF COTTON NOT A CERTAINTY

"In so far as present influences and the current action of the market are concerned, the situation in cotton does not call for extended comment," says Munds & Winslow's cotton review.

"We have seen nothing that would modify materially the opinion expressed in our letter of last week—that most of the influences responsible for the wave of bearishness that developed a month or six weeks ago are no longer existent. By this we do not mean to take the stand that conditions at the moment are bristling with constructive potentialities. The textile industry is suffering from unremunerative margins.

"A fairly large business has been passing, with the turnover probably equal to current production. Buyers are willing to take goods on a large scale which should be construed as an evidence of requirements. However, they seem confident of being able to fill their needs at low prices, while mills are uncertain of their own position. Manufacturers, in their sales, appear to be operating on what might be called a dilemma basis. They are faced by the necessity of selling a large output around cost or less or having their production costs climb if they institute curtailment.

"This we consider the most unfavorable feature of the present situation. From the standpoint of raw material, however, it means that a large amount of cotton is being consumed.

"On the other hand, the spot situation has developed decided firmness. Whereas a few weeks ago ⅞-inch cotton was on a tenderable basis in practically every Southern market, deliveries on contract could not now be effected without a loss of several dollars per bale. The outlook for the new crop will have to improve considerably to come up to the promise existing a little more than three weeks ago. It is possible for this to happen, even probable with a week or two of good weather. Nevertheless, the delay imposed by replanting and the slow growth resulting from general and continued rains with low temperatures places the new season under a handicap in the race with weevil.

"In respect to this latter phase of the situation, the known facts are these: An unprecedentedly large wevil population entered winter quarters and autumn. Decidedly less than the usual winter mortality has been experienced on account of the relatively mild temperatures. Initial infestation is likely to cover a record area. The extent of damage will be governed by the type of weather control in June and July. We do not expect much resistance to the inroads of the weevil from poisoning campaigns this season. We are reliably informed that the available supply of calcium arsenate at this time is not much in excess of 2000 tons. Last season three manufacturers of this insecticide went out of business. In order to poison effectively 10,000,000 acres, or about one-fifth of the prospective acreage, it would require 100,000 tons of calcium arsenate.

"These figures give some idea of the problem confronting the southern grower this season if the weather should be showery in the first two months of the summer.

YOUNG BUSIER THAN MORGAN, SAYS FORBES

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, May 27—Both J. P. Morgan and his principal partner, Thomas W. Lamont, have figured very lightly in the Paris reparations conference publicity. The three members who have been most in the limelight are Owen D. Young, Sir Josiah Stamp and Dr. Schacht. Curiously, all three are old friends.

B. C. Forbes

Mr. Young and Sir Josiah, it is now no secret, were the mainsprings of the original Dawes commission. This brainy Briton regards Owen Young as among the very foremost minds of the world today. And he freely conceded first honors to him for his Dawes commission achievements. Mr. Young similarly, has an extremely high regard for Stamp's ability. Dr. Schacht, head of the Reichsbank, is considered a die-hard German, consumingly eager to drive the hardest of hard bargains on behalf of his country. Only the infinite patience of Young saved the present conference from deadlocking weeks ago.

Young and Stamp and Schacht all are gluttons for work. Mr. Morgan isn't. He has reached a time of life when he considers himself entitled to have his capable associates bear the brunt of the Morgan firm's colossal responsibilities. He keeps fully informed and does not hesitate to express his judgment when occasion arises. But, unlike his father, he derives no tremendous thrill from personally engineering great financial operations.

That this plan has worked admirably is proved by the fact that the Morgan firm is today far more influential and powerful—and, incidentally, wealthy—than even in the heyday of its founder. It throbs with choice young blood, including a generous sprinkling of partners who are the sons of partners.

There probably will be a great reunion of Dawes Commission members when Ambassador Charles G takes up his abode in London. He is most popular with these cronies.

Most of our railway managers are old enough to remember terribly vividly how unpopular the railroads were 20 years ago. They are little likely to start anything calculated again to arose the public ire. While the Supreme Court's O'Fallon decision theoretically opens the way to higher freight rates, it is wholly improbable that precipitate or drastic action will be attempted. Most railway managers have no desire to reawaken government ownership clamor, now dormant. Moreover, stiff rates would foster competition on the oceans, on navigable rivers and on highways.

Had Wall Street been in an exuberant mood when this long-awaited decision came, you would have witnessed dazzling fireworks. But Wall Street happened to be bearish; consequently, little happened.

The next big railway event now awaited is the attitude of the Interstate Commerce Commission towards huge consolidations. President Hoover's well known championship of everything calculated to eliminate waste will have a potent influence, the financial world hopes, on the Commission. If an epochal favorable decision were to come while the stock market was gay, there doubtless would be a spectacular demonstration. If not, not.

Wall Street for quite some time has been swayed from day to day by sentimental and momentary influence rather than by profound, basic facts. When Wall Street chooses to don blue glasses everything looks blue; when it puts on rose-colored glasses it sees everything rosy. The rose-colored glasses seem to have been laid aside.

NEW HAVEN HAS NEW GAINS IN EARNINGS

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Financial recovery of the New Haven Railroad is being emphasized month by month, with figures that must be highly gratifying to the stockholders. And not only to the stockholders, but also to those heading the line, President John J. Pelley and Vice-President and Chairman E. G. Buckland.

E. G. Buckland — Associated Press Photo — John J. Pelley

It will be recalled that the Massachusetts Public Utilities Commission report early in the year, when the New Haven common was around $85 a share, predicted the stock would sell at $100 this year, which it has already bettered. When the prediction was made the U. S. Supreme Court had not rendered its now famous and far-reaching O'Fallon case decision, which greatly improves the technical position of the New Haven, as well as that of other railroads in the good earnings class.

It was a Boston broker who bought the first share of New Haven sold above $100 this year

There follows New Haven's monthly report, made public today, of revenues and expenses for the month of April, 1929, and the four months ended April 30, 1929.

	1929	1928
April gross (total operating revenue)	$11,629,848	$11,134,774
Net ry. op. income.	2,386,865	1,968,326

*Surplus	1,310,306	461,411
Four months' gross (total oper. rev.)	43,487,616	42,585,189
Net ry. op. income.	8,830,901	6,606,956
Net after charges	4,600,155	2,081,857
*Surplus	3,545,210	380,667

*After guarantees and preferred dividends.

Who is the largest stockholder in the New Haven? The Pennsylvania. Who is the largest stockholder in the Boston & Maine? The New Haven.

Transportation as speedy as possible, consistent with safety, is needed for the continuance and expansion of present prosperity. In this connection it is interesting to study the epitome of motor laws as compiled by the American Automobile Association. This gives the maximum "legal" speed limit on the open road in Massachusetts as 20 miles an hour. The majority of states appear to favor a 35-mile limit, while several places the limit at 45. Connecticut, a state with comparatively few accidents, has no speed limit, and compels slow traffic to keep to the right.

It is our understanding that some traffic officers, in certain sections of the Commonwealth, will overlook it if you do not too greatly exceed 20 miles an hour. Good trotting horses have been known to achieve a speed of better than 30 miles an hour.

* * *

John Howeson, Great Britain's "Tin King," declares the producers are still disorganized and in competition, with many selling the metal at a loss. This is despite the fact that tonnage sales have risen 20 per cent, in two years. Revenue has fallen off 17 per cent, in the same period. Many changes have come about in the tin industry since canning was first made commercially practical right here in Boston. Not many months have gone since predictions were freely offered that the supply of tin would become exhausted and that other food containers must be utilized.

Although tin has declined in cost, glass, paper and even wooden containers have been largely supplanting it for certain products.

* * *

Discussion of percentage increases by present day economists frequently becomes confused. It is well to bear in mind, for example, that a 25 per cent. increase for 100 units is numerically considerably larger than a 100 per cent increase for a single unit. Percentages tell only part of the story.

* * *

Stock market sages frequently remark that "water will seek its own level," but infrequently add that sometimes obstacles prevent the element from arriving at its destination. That is equally true of stock market prices. Some stocks are nearly always too high, others nearly always too low.

NEW DEADLINE IN SLOGAN CONTEST

Members of the Boston American Lindbergh Club living in Providence, Pawtucket, Newport, New Bedford, Fall River, Attleboro, Brockton, Lowell, Malden, Lynn, Salem, Gloucester, Portland, Me., Newburyport, Portsmouth, Concord, Manchester, Fitchburg, Framingham, New London, Stamford and Willimantic, will be granted an extension of time on their slogans for Tom Mix.

The closing time for sending in your slogans from these cities will be midnight, Wednesday. Now hurry. The five members of the club living in each city who write the best slogans will be given two tickets each to Sells-Floto circus, to be used when the circus shows in their home town.

JUNE 1 FOR BOSTON

This extension of time does not apply to members living in Boston. The judges must have ample time to pass on each slogan so as to select the winner of that free trip with the circus when it leaves Boston on the night of June 1. The closing time for sending your slogans if you live in Boston or other cities and towns not named above will be extended to midnight tonight.

The first 25 boys and girls who write the best slogans will receive four tickets each to the circus. The next 25 boys and girls will receive two tickets each and the next 100 boys and girls will receive one ticket each.

Then there are additional offers of more than 200 tickets for boys and girls who will be unable to see the circus in Boston, but will be able to go to the big show when it come sto their home town.

Tom Mix and the management of Sells-Floto circus are making an offer to the boys of the Boston American Lindbergh Club which is unique in the history of the circus

It is just this

The boy of the club who writes the best advertising slogan for Tom Mix will be given a trip with the circus and Tom Mix for a day. In other words he will be a "circus man" for a day. Tom Mix will be his pal and look out for him. He will eat in the circus cook tent with the manager of the circus, Tom and other performers.

NO SCHOOL TIME COST

This lucky boy will leave Boston on the night of June 1 for Providence, traveling in the private Pullman of Tom Mix. He will spend the following day in Providence on the circus grounds, returning home that evening with a representative of the Boston Evening American in time for school the following morning. As the trip will be made over the week-end he will not lose any time from school.

We cannot give the girls of our club the same offer, but they can write slogans and win free tickets to the circus either in Boston or other New England cities where Sells-Floto circus will show after closing its week's engagement in Boston.

Here is the slogan which Sells-Floto circus now is using in advertising Tom Mix: "Loved by every child, Admired by every man, Adored by every woman."

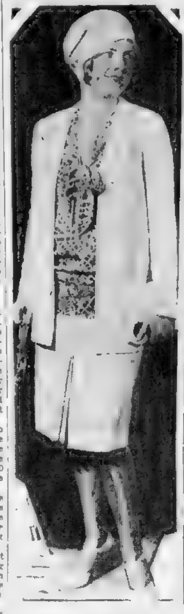
Now boys and girls, let's write a better slogan.

Send all slogans to Slogan Editor, Boston Evening American, Lindbergh Club, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

Judges in the search for the double of Frankie Darro among the boys of the Boston American Lindbergh Club completed their task Saturday It was some task. Thousands of pictures were received and each picture was passed upon twice.

The name and a picture of the winner alongside the picture of Frankie Darro, the juvenile movie star who plays a leading role in "The Rainbow Man," will be published tomorrow in all editions of the Boston Evening American. This lucky member of our club will make a trip to New York as the guest of the Publix Theaters of Boston.

Sweet in Rayon



This is a three-piece suit described as having a blouse of duplain printed duray, designed by Dandon & Sons. Juillard's designed white creperic blouse of duplais crepe. All of which is less important than to say this entire ensemble is made of rayon fabrics.

The Rayon Institute of America will hold a fashion and fabric exhibit in the Garden Home Room of R. H. White's beginning at three o'clock today and continuing through Wednesday. On Tuesday and Wednesday, there will be two fashion shows, one at eleven in the morning and the other at three in the afternoon.

Seven models will appear at each show wearing apparel made of rayon. Even hats and shoes of rayon will be shown. Miss Anne Wright of the Rayon Institute of America will lecture on the uses of this material.

Music will be furnished by Ruby Newman's string ensemble

The R. H. White management expects that thousands of women will attend this exhibit. Wearing apparel of every description, draperies and curtains of rayon will be shown, and the advantages of using rayon will be explained by the lecturer.

Rayon, according to the Institute, can be washed using the same care that would be taken with silk, woolen or cotton goods. Another advantage of rayon, according to dressmakers is that it offers possibilities in weave, color and construction not found in other fabrics

Rayon dealers expects that within the next two years rayon will be as much used as cotton and woolen. At the present time, more rayon is used than silk or linen.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

60-Seconds Coffee

WOULD you be astonished to know that one department of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has devoted three years to experiment and research in accidentally spending $40,000 in an endeavor to produce a perfect cup of coffee?

The result, we regret to say, Professor Prescott states, is the perfect coffee was brewed in a glass.

Another interesting by-product of the three-year test of the world famous institute is contained in Professor Prescott's sad report that "It is easy to boil an egg, cook down to breakfast wheat, or make the coffee is being made in the right way. If the house is filled with a delicious, appetizing odor the person preparing it makes a poor coffee, because the aroma should not be wasted in steam and diminish the richness of the beverage."

You can now get not only a perfect coffee, but modern coffee in the preparation of which no coffee pot or percolator is required. This is a bottled coffee, a perfect blend of the finest coffees obtainable, in concentrated liquid form, and in glass.

This concentrated coffee is made by the improved method, simply pouring boiling water through the freshly ground coffee and allow it to drip into a warm glass coffee pot. The original aroma of the fragrant coffee bean is actually imprisoned in the glass. It is always there, ready to be released in making the perfect cup of coffee in less than 60 seconds.

All that it is necessary to do is to pour a measure of this bottled coffee (the measure forms the stopper), into a cup and add boiling water. Then, of course, cream and sugar to your taste. The high quality—the fragrant aroma—the delicious flavor are always in the bottle, down to the last spoonful.

This new coffee takes all the chance out of coffee making. It is invariably uniform always giving you the same good cup of coffee. It certainly will be welcomed for people who live in the modern manner where minutes count.

It brings the breakfast schedule ten minutes earlier, and incidentally leaves no grounds to be disposed of, no pot to clean, no waste, no evaporation. You get 25 to 40 cups per pint in using this new modern beverage, which, by the way, you should soon find at your local grocer's.

You can imagine how convenient it is, too, to always have rich, concentrated coffee on hand for use in flavoring ice cream, puddings, cakes, frostings and fillings.

And with hot weather just around the corner, think of the comfort of being able to serve refreshing iced coffee at a moment's notice. For the piazza party on summer nights what a more delicious thing a glass half filled with chipped ice, a measure of this delicious concentrated coffee, a dash of powdered sugar and cream, and enough water to fill the glass.

Dooven Ends Chef Talks

ALL roads will lead to the Martha Lee Kitchen next Wednesday afternoon, when progressive housewives will be flocking from all over New England to take advantage of the last Chef's Day of the season, which will be in charge of our very good friend, K. Camille Dooven, recognized as one of the foremost chefs in this country.

We doubt if any one in New England does not know of Mr. Len Dooven's interesting life history: his eight-year apprenticeship served in his native Belgium, his following connections with the best hotels of Paris and Budapest his years of study under M. Escoffier of the Ritz-Carlton in London and his service as chef to Albert, king of the Belgians.

Held by his conscience to a previous engagement at the Hotel Vanderbilt, in New York, Mr. Den Dooven left the royal family in Belgium to come to America. From the Vanderbilt he went to Washington and later to the New Ocean House at Swampscott. For three years he did research work for the United Fruit Company, preparing their banana recipe book, and for the last year has been doing laboratory work for the A. Johnson Company of 221 State st., manufacturers of baker's supplies, with whom he is now affiliated.

Mr. Den Dooven not only stands on the top rung of his profession but he is recognized as an authority in the culinary book world. Within the past year he has presented three comprehensive books on professional and home cookery. These are: "The Master Baker and His Work," "The Hotel and Restaurant Dessert Book," and his newest volume, "The Modern Cook Book," designed for practical home use.

A particularly interesting feature of this book aside from the infinite variety of the recipes is that the measurements are given both in weights and the ordinary housemaker's cup and pint measures. Mr. Den Dooven feels that an accurate scale is a necessary part of every up-to-date kitchen equipment.

This lesson on Wednesday will be on Summer desserts and will include the following dishes:

Melba Sauce, Apricot Sauce, Salad Parisienne, Lobster Salad a la Russe, Vanilla Bavarian Cream, Chocolate Bavarian Cream, Marquise Bavarian Cream, Melba Bavarian Cream, Strawberry Bavarian Cream, Coupe Comtesse, Walnut Bavarian Cream, Peach Melba, Pear Melba, Strawberry Pompadour, Parfait Melba, Parfait d'Orsellas, Vanilla Mousse, Coffee Mousse Maison Helene, Mousse Melba, Coupe Antigny, and Coupe Marie-Louise.

Needless to say, it is a lesson that will be of inestimable value to all interested in the culinary art.

A balanced diet calls for two vegetables daily, besides potatoes; one of these should be fresh and uncooked.

Tells How to Be Thin

IF you are one of the army of would-be-thins, you cannot be too careful in choosing your diet. Remember that "all fat goes in at the mouth" and be guided accordingly.

A sample breakfast for the would-be-thin consists of a 5 per cent or 10 per cent fruit, one thin slice of toast, 1 egg, if desired, clear coffee or cocoa shells or skimmed milk.

In the middle of the forenoon, unsweetened lemonade or clear broth may be taken. For lunch a skimmed-milk soup, or clear soup or bouillon soup, two 5 per cent green vegetables, egg or cottage cheese, a bran muffin, fruit for dessert (a 5 per cent or 10 per cent fruit) or a gelatin dessert or a skimmed milk drink.

For dinner clear soup or skimmed milk soup, lean meat, fish or chicken, or 1 egg or a cheese dish, two 5 per cent green vegetables, a bran muffin, fruit for dessert (a 5 per cent or 10 per cent fruit) or a gelatin dessert or a skimmed milk drink.

Five per cent vegetables include: lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers, asparagus, rhubarb, beet greens, celery, cabbage, kale, brussels sprouts, water cress, leeks, cauliflower, sauerkraut, eggplant, string beans, radishes, dandelions, swiss chard. Ten per cent vegetables include pumpkins, turnips, squash, beets, carrots and onions.

The 5 per cent fruits are grapefruit and lemons, and the 10 per cent fruits are oranges, cranberries, strawberries, gooseberries, peaches, pineapple and watermelon.

New Toaster Is Fast

THE very newest piece of equipment in the Martha Lee Kitchen is a sandwich toaster that makes up the most delicious sandwiches in a few seconds.

It toasts them on both sides at once and in 20 seconds by the clock the sandwich is ready to take out. Three-decker sandwiches are as easy to toast as single slices of bread and are luscious served piping hot.

This new toaster makes perfect wafer-thin Melba toast, too, the kind you get at the expensive hotels and recommended for those who are careful of their diet.

A toaster of this kind is invaluable in tea rooms as well as in your own home. Imagine the fun and novelty of serving these luscious hot sandwiches for Sunday night suppers or at bridge parties. You can make the sandwiches up ahead and then toast them at the last minute.

I am only sorry that I cannot tell you the name of this toaster here, but I can write you where you'll find it, if you'll drop me a line.

Auction Bidding: South bids one Club and North takes out with one No Trump.

Contract Bidding: South's bid of one Club should be taken out by North with a bid of two No Trumps, such take-out, like an original bid of two No Trumps, showing all four suits stopped and three suits doubly stopped, assuming South to have double stoppers in the Club suit.

In response to North's forcing bid of two No Trumps, South should keep the bidding open by a bid of three Spades to encourage North to bid three No Trumps in case Spades happens to be his suit that is but singly stopped. But upon this showing of the Spade suit, North, with four cards of it, including two honors, should bid four Spades instead of three No Trumps.

The Play: In the play of the hand, whatever be the opening lead against the Spade Contract, game is easily made and five odd is probable. Played at No Trump, East's opening lead would be the 9 of Hearts, and with this opening but eight tricks can be made.

This hand affords an excellent illustration of the fact that Contract bidding in its present stage of development generally uncovers the best bid of partnership hands, whereas Auction bidding is apt to stop before such bid is reached.

Tomorrow's article will show the bidding and play of another hand.

HIDDEN FIRES

Story of Love and Mystery in Gay Honolulu

CHAPTER 13

THE Wilsons were discussing Ruth's love affairs. It was late afternoon of an exceptionally warm day and Big Tim Wilson had come home from the office to take Ruth and Elden to Waikiki for a swim. Ruth was plainly disgusted with her mother, who was speaking.

"Why couldn't you have married one of the rich Adams boys, Ruth? What was his name—Jim?"

Jimmy Adams had been infatuated with Ruth for years. It would have pleased Selma—that marriage. And Big Tim—whose god was money, and the power it brought.

"That little shrimp! He only comes to my shoulder. And I'm nothing but a flea for size myself. I can't stand even the sight of him."

"I know, dear, but he comes from one of the oldest and richest families in the islands, and he could have taken care of you so nicely. As it is now with Al——"

"Al has him beat a mile. In every way. Al has U. S. A. And I don't mean the United States of America, either." Ruth daintily tore a rose hibiscus blossom into shreds.

"What on earth are you talking about, Ruthie?" asked her father. He had just come onto the porch and heard the discussion.

"Universal sex appeal. Listen, old boy, can't even you sense that in him?"

Here was the moment for which Big Tim had been waiting. It was seldom that Ruth asked his opinion about her love affairs. It only meant a quarrel between them, for Ruth was positive in her avowal that she and Al would settle their problems in the new companionate manner. Al was not making enough money to support a home yet, so she intended living at home while waiting for him to get started. This thought infuriated Big Tim Wilson. He felt that they would be the laughing stock of Honolulu.

Big Tim heaved his massive form into a veranda chair, which creaked beneath his weight.

"All I know, Ruthie, is that every time I look at that big stiff I have a mad desire to punch him two inches from the point of his jaw and make it a K. O."

"And that would be O. K with him, old boy, for what he would do to you is nobody's business."

"Ar-r-r-rumph!" Big Tim gave a snort of disgust.

"Well, I guess I'll just have to enjoy my wedding by myself. And come back to the parental home —not for the customary blessing, but for a lot of abuse."

Ruth's tone was bitter. Big Tim glowered at her, but he would not give in. Her eyes returned as good as he gave.

"I'm going in to change my dress. Al and I are going out to the fights at Pearl Harbor tonight."

"Ruth! You don't mean it. I didn't know nice girls went to prize fights."

"Maybe I'm not what you would call a nice girl, Mother, but I like them, and we're going to be pals—always. That's one way we're going to make a success of marriage."

Ruth disappeared into the coolness of the house.

A prize fight was a new experience for Ruth. She didn't know whether she exactly liked the atmosphere of the ring.

The air was filled with smoke from the cigarettes and cigars. Through the smoke could be seen the thousands of faces of the United States—and can't read a note!"

"But—" Her face was like a big O, as Tommy Speed's arm. "But he doesn't mean that? Well—I don't understand—"

They laughed at her confusion; Speed explained: "It's true—I can't read a note, or play one either. All I can do is hum a tune. I get an idea and hum it and a player puts it in writing for me."

Jone and Papa Weimar come suddenly charging down the room. They talked, he and Benz, with their faces close together and many flappy, furious gestures from the old man.

Papa Weimar wanted Benz to see Anthony Ros.

"You mean Antony Ros? You're going to see him now? Oh, Mr. Benz—please—couldn't I go? Well —I'd love it so!"

Antony Ros was the newest and most adored matinee idol in New York.

"Best 'song plug' in America, girls—and don't let 'em argue different. If he puts on this for us it's a work. But will he, what I'm asking. It's for Tommy."

Wolfie Speed told her that, plodding about in circles, scowling. It was his affair, "only You," they were taking to Ros.

Benz dashed in and asked for Ros all over the theatre back stage from the Russian chorus.

Benz helped her into Papa Weimar's limousine and got in beside her.

Lanny whispered when they were in the theatre back stage. "You're sweet, Jo—well, but you're sweet——"

She gave him a vague smile, made a dreamy gesture toward the stage. "It's the music makes you say that, Mr. Lanny."

"You think so?" he said, through straightened lips. "Sometime there'll be no music—no Tommy Speed—no me and thee and a lot of solitude. You'll believe me then, sweet Jone?"

Presently Ros was coming, talking earnestly with Benz; he shrugged, threw out his hands, finally sat down, wagging his head.

Alan began to play then, grinning at her sidewise; Speed half talked, half sang "Only You."

"There's a girl in Dundee,

There is a girl in Tralee——"

A rollicky melody, a piquant, accentric rhythm—very captivating. Jone caught it.

Ros made one of those flinging movements with his hands in the air, sacked Jone's arm, "It wouldn't stage—no picture in it——"

But she had seen it in her thoughts—a row of pictures—out there against the drop. Trembling with excitement she sprang up and darted around the piano with her hands out.

"Oh—oh, listen! If they'd darken the stage and have the spotlight on you and have the girls—you know, the Scotch girl and the Irish girl and the Spanish and she others—if they'd have them all dim, sort of, as if you were dreaming them, and at the end of America singing —the "Only You" girl—well, she could be real. And with your glorious voice—"

She stopped then, panic stricken —looked around. Benz and Speed and Lanny were looking at her. Ros was coming toward her with his famous smile.

It was all very simple. Ros disposed of their differences with a backward flirt of one shoulder; he held out his slim, brown hands, palms downward, as if resting them on a great deal of money; he kept talking to Jone.

It was Benz who swung her into the car.

"So she put it over on the old timers! Tell you, Wolf, it's going to pay having one like her around. Pint a million years old served up with a blue-eyed stare——"

He glanced down at her rather proudly. But her lips were shaking. "I didn't mean to be forward —truly! You see— Well, he said there was no picture in it. Such a lovely song—"

Benz kept patting her arm, chuckling all the time. "Why, you saved the day for us! Wait till Weimar hears—he'll want to give you a medal. And why not? Ah —congratulations, fair one!"

Marie thought of keeping her job after she was married, partly because Jenepher had been so successful. But her ideas were beyond Jenepher's, who had dreamed of friendships Tim couldn't or wouldn't share.

And Jenepher's aim was not financial independence for herself; rather it was to see that her son and her home were better cared for than they might have been without her efforts.

Once after that Jone asked Marie what happens when a baby comes into a fifty-fifty marriage.

"The mother loses some of her independence, doesn't she. Or does she?"

Marie shrugged.

There was a long, white box on her desk the next morning. Yellow roses all banked with candytuft and fern.

"Darlings—ah, Marie—look!" Rosmarie was opening her now, squealing shivers of rapture over her. "Oh, the envelope!" She tore that open. "Antony Ros" was engraved on the card.

Alan Blake sauntered in from the studios, and quickly followed gay look he sent to her corner.

"Morning, sweetie sweet. Hey—Ros better mind his step, the big bum!" Laughing and breaking a spray of candytuft for his buttonhole.

Benz came to search the bouquet for a yellow bud. She found one and made him bend down while she fastened it to his coat.

"There—so handsome he is!"

"That's a thing to remember! Since you like his looks how about dining with him? Run up the Drive to the River Inn—dance a little frivolious—swell?"

"Ah, tonight, you see—it's all taken."

The first four rounds passed quickly.

Ugh! That fifth round was a vicious one. Mickey Flynn, he of the green tights, was pounding his adversary. Blood streamed from his nose; one eye was beginning to close.

Ugh! And men called this sport. She glanced at Al's face, upon which she saw intense eagerness.

Well, if he was enjoying himself.

Mickey Flynn won, Al was jubilant over the fact.

"I made $10 on that fight, sweetheart. One of the fellows made a bet with me."

Ruth was silent. Al looked at her keenly.

"You don't care much for prize-fights, do you, sweetheart?"

"Not too much, dear. But if I'm going to be a pal to you, I'll have to enjoy your pleasures."

They passed out into the cool air of night.

"Let's go over and see Don Carlos a while before I go home," suggested Ruth on the way home. "Somehow, I'm fed up on the family tonight, and he may be able to clear my viewpoint. If I weren't so very much in love with you, Al, old dear, I would certainly play my cards for him. I think he's the best looking thing I've seen in many an age."

"Here! Here! Don't you think I ever get jealous? I love you so much, Ruth, dear. I could just lay down and die for you." He clasped her to him.

Ruth was going up the path which led to Don Carlos' bungalow. He heard her approach, and came out on the porch to greet them clad in light flannel trousers and a soft silk shirt, open at the throat to show the fine line of it.

"Success to love, of course. It's going to be a success. Who denies it?

"What are you raving about, Don Carlos?"

"About my new play, Ruth. Oh, Boy! I've been working hard on it. I've got this time. It'll take the town by storm. I've had the real idea passed to me. It took the islands to show me real plots. What's the success you were talking about, Ruth?"

"Oh, the usual stuff—trying to win Dad over to our side. I don't see why he can't be reasonable about things."

Ruth suddenly turned to Don Carlos. "I wonder if you haven't been wise, Don Carlos, not to jump into marriage. No one in it seems to be happy; those who are in it are always trying to get out."

"Well, I like that," began Al "Just about the time I have sold myself the idea that you are madly in love with me, you spring something like that. Maybe you'd like to slide out of the proposition altogether. I thought you were so keen about this new companionate idea. Being two pals, although married, and trying to make a sane thing out of marriage."

Then in an aggrieved tone, "I suppose you'd prefer Jimmy Adams. At least, he could make a home for you, bought with his father's money."

Al walked to the edge of the lanai and stared into the lovely night.

"Maybe I will, Al Harding, if you get too smart."

"Children! Children! Don't quarrel. That's what spoiled life for me—a bitter quarrel between my wife and myself."

"Your wife, Don Carlos? Tell us about it." Then seeing the dark look on his face, she added, "Oh, my dear, if it has bitter memories——"

"Bitter! Lord! I hope you kids will never know the bitterness. Don't think of me as ever having had a wife. I'm not thinking about it? What has been done can never be undone——

Later, the hour which Ruth gave Al had in it all the sweet reassurance she could give.

HALF WIVES

by Winifred Van Duzer

A SIX-DAY NOVEL

smiling uncertainly. "Oh—you said 'Lanny? Well—why—"

She had a sudden, bright sense of his ardent youth; a young fellow, twenty-one or so, starting out to capture the world; an accompanist in the studios. Like her on his first job.

She asked Jone: "Did you like Alan Blake? But, of course, everyone does.

"They say he came here from college. He was playing in a musical society and met one of our studio men—Wolfie Speed, it was. He's awfully clever; Weimar's going to pass him higher as soon as he learns the ropes, I heard. Look —right on the dot!"

On the way home Jone thought of Jenepher and her marriage. Wedded five years now, she was barely twenty-six, and buyer in a department of a smart Fifth Ave. shop.

She had been only a clerk there when she met Tim Wilson and they fell tumbling into love.

They were married. And Jenepher, giving up her work, soon learned that a salary squandered blithely on one must be doled out with caution if it is to cover the needs of two.

Soon she was back on her so old job.

They bought a new home. What Jenepher had saved made the down payment and instalments were easily met from her salary.

Two years—Jenepher coming home; then, reluctantly, rebellious-ly—ah, indeed! For her fool was on the ladder now; there was a good chance she might be buyer some day.

Even when her little son lay in her arms she wasn't reconciled to throwing those together and many still was something due on the house and baby Timmy, now—he'd have needs!

Well—Tim was a head bookkeeper now. At about half what Jenepher earned. . . . Any woman would be proud of success. No wonder little Marie wanted to keep at work like Jenepher, brilliant thing!

She now had come to a thrilling experience.

It was the day when Eddie Benz had planned to take her to the professional studios; when she was to invade the mysteries of Tin Pan Alley.

A short, dark-complexioned man was in the music room; an undistinguished person.

"Ha—the celebrated Wolfie Speed! Salaam, Miss Farr! Author of this trash I'm forced to accompany about what they pay the President of the United States—and can't read a note!"

"But—" Her face was like a big O, as Tommy Speed's arm. "But he doesn't mean that? Well—I don't understand—"

They laughed at her confusion; Speed explained: "It's true—I can't read a note, or play one either. All I can do is hum a tune. I get an idea and hum it and a player puts it in writing for me."

Jone and Papa Weimar come suddenly charging down the room. They talked, he and Benz, with their faces close together and many flappy, furious gestures from the old man.

Papa Weimar wanted Benz to see Anthony Ros.

"You mean Antony Ros? You're going to see him now? Oh, Mr. Benz—please—couldn't I go? Well —I'd love it so!"

Antony Ros was the newest and most adored matinee idol in New York.

"Best 'song plug' in America, girls—and don't let 'em argue different. If he puts on this for us it's a work. But will he, what I'm asking. It's for Tommy."

Wolfie Speed told her that, plodding about in circles, scowling. It was his affair, "only You," they were taking to Ros.

Benz dashed in and asked for Ros all over the theatre back stage from the Russian chorus.

Benz helped her into Papa Weimar's limousine and got in beside her.

Lanny whispered when they were in the theatre back stage. "You're sweet, Jo—well, but you're sweet——"

She gave him a vague smile, made a dreamy gesture toward the stage. "It's the music makes you say that, Mr. Lanny."

"You think so?" he said, through straightened lips. "Sometime there'll be no music—no Tommy Speed—no me and thee and a lot of solitude. You'll believe me then, sweet Jone?"

Presently Ros was coming, talking earnestly with Benz; he

The Doctor's Choice -:- A Short Story

By GUY SWARINGEN.

"EVEN', Bert." Old Doc Blair, seeing who his visitor was, eschewed formality by leaving his feet on his desk. "Sit down and rest."

"Evenin', Doc." Bert Glidden perched on the desk, took off his soft felt hat and stared down at it. "I been told to speak to you."

"Speak away. Anybody sitting?"

"No." Bert gazed into the hat earnestly, his round red face thoughtful. "My wife, she asked me to tell you that, from now on, we'd rather you'd come to our house when needed instead of sendin' your assistant."

"Um!" Doc stroked his white beard. "Honestly, Bert, the boy's better equipped than I am. Knows most of the latest medical doodads."

"Mebby. But he hasn't learned folks yet—at least not here. Though that ain't the point exactly. My wife says—"

"Yes, he's a capable, likeable boy, and he's got to get his experience somewhere. I don't need any assistant, for that matter. But Emil Lutz, over at the university, sent him here. I went to see Emil last winter and the old fool evidently took a notion I was growing senile, or something!"

"Yes, he is," Bert Glidden laughed. "You growin' senile! No, I reckon they've got to put these young graduates somewhere. And we haven't any special objection to a young man, not just because he's young. But——"

"But what? Didn't Amory prescribe the right dope?"

"His medicine's all right. But, Doc, a young man—specially a young doctor—oughta be careful of his associates. This Amory Drake, now, he's been to see Jane Dalton!"

"Ha, Ha!" Old Doc laughed mostly to cover up a sudden discomfort. "Is that all? Bert, don't you know a doctor's bound to go where he's needed?"

"He wasn't needed there," Bert Glidden maintained. "Jane wasn't sick. I doubt if she's ever been sick. He's been there more than once."

"What of it?" Doc asked crossly. "Whose business——"

"Nobody's. Also it's nobody's business if me and my family prefer another doctor. That's the way most folks around here feel, Doc."

"Yeh." Old Doc nodded gloomy surrender of the point. "Not much use trying to change public opinion, once it gets its head set. But now, just between us two, do you really see anything disgraceful against Jane?"

"N-no, not for sure. But it's—"

"Yeh, it's said! It's said that five or six years ago she was being courted by that young lawyer Simmons who came here. Jane was just a kid. They were supposed to be getting along all right, and might have made a match."

"Then old Tobe Dalton came right out and asked the fellow to marry her. He insisted and made threats. Naturally Simmons left in disgust. I've heard that he married somewhere else, and is doing well. Everybody here knows that Tobe put his foot down, always has been and always will be. So—"

"But it's a fact that Jane's never been known to have another beau. And most any time you can hear men going there late at night. There and—and—somewhere else!"

"Late at night!" Doc railed. "Bert, I know you're truthful. If you'll give me your word not to tell even your wife—"

"Of course. Know better than to tell her secrets. What is 'em?"

"I happen to know that Tobe sells liquor. It's against the law, but I've been fellows there to buy from him when I thought it was needed for medicine. That accounts for men going there late at night."

"Oh, I s'pose I'll speak to him—not that I think it'll do any good."

"And you got to admit, Doc," said Glidden thoughtfully, "that for years she's stayed at home mostly and not associated with folks."

"Well, darn it, Bert, any girl has pride. Jane's probably even prouder than most, because she hasn't had much else to think about for some years. How can a girl get out and get friendly with folks who plainly show they don't want her?"

A car was stopping outside, and Bert Glidden rose. "Well, I'll be goin', Doc. Don't need to tell Drake I said anything."

He stepped to the door, but the latest arrivals were already coming in. Bert held it open for the woman who entered first, and he got a glimpse behind it as she would see his surprise. Then Amory Drake came in, and Glidden hurried out. Old Doc Blair rose as there was honest welcome on his face.

"Evenin', Juno," he greeted Amory's companion. She was a tall golden blonde, built like a young goddess, her face full of color from the warm blood under the skin. The lift of her head had always interested Old Doc, and the fact that she had never bobbed her ash-yellow hair. Amory Drake looked like a bride for her, for all his red hair and habitual air of grim competence.

"Hello, Doctor!" There was a lilt in the girl's voice and a sparkle in her blue eyes that made Old Doc stare at her more attentively. She looked at Amory with a grave significance, as though waiting for him to speak.

Amory did. He blurted out in a rush: "Doc, we want to get health certificates, and get a license, and get married!"

"Um!" Old Doc Blair pushed forward two chairs, and sat down in a third.

"Sit down." He soberly eyed the eager, very masculine face of young Doctor Drake; then the lovely one of June Dalton. She seemed aglow with a radiance from within. Old Doc's hard schooling had taught him that one should not hesitate to use the knife when a patient's life was at stake, or that patient's happiness either.

"Amory," he said soberly, "do you know the things folks say and believe about June?"

"Sure—the hounds!" Red-headed Amory Drake's eyes were blazing his face so white as to make Old Doc regard him with questioning attention. "The dirty lies that have been told! Oh, yes, I know—"

Old Doc turned to June. "All right. Mr. Drake, and he still wants to marry you. Are you willing to let him?"

"Yes. I wouldn't if it were true, but—"

"Then, that's all right. I've never believed those lies, girl."

Amory, still white, fumbled for his chair and sat down.

"I know Doc, and serving the public has to be governed largely by public opinion. But it won't matter much. We're not going to live here. One of the big electric power companies is building a new town near the other end of the state. We're going there, and may locate for good."

Old Doc nodded. "I guess that'll be a good idea."

He stood up at June, with the kind of smile Old Doc liked to see.

"After all, Doc," he said thoughtfully, "I see nothing wrong in something. It was their tales that made me notice her in the first place."

NOVEL FILM AT MODERN AND BEACON

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The keynote of the excellence of "Thru Different Eyes," showing this week at the Modern and Beacon, lies in the fact that it is indeed different. And how! Through a combination of clever directing, fine acting and a rare adjustment of all the fine points of motion picture art, there is here born a photoplay that is well nigh epochal.

This film gets by on its merit and yet so superbly has Director John Blystone done his job, that the talking seems only incidental as eye and mind are focused on an unusual method of bringing out the story.

It is an all-talkie, deserving of the fullest success. The film is unique in one particular. Three different versions are given of a murder mystery, one by the prosecuting attorney, one by the defense counsel, and the third by the murderess. Each brings out essentials; and the audience is enabled to strike the happy medium in arriving at a correct characterization of the three principals, played by Edmund Lowe, Mary Duncan, and Warner Baxter.

Thus "Thru Different Eyes" attacks its mystery in a novel way. It is intelligently handled throughout. You hear the defense building up its case; then the fade-out to permit the actual characters to live the lawyer's outline for him, with full dialogue. Then again to the courtroom; this time it is the prosecuting attorney; fade-out again, and his version is portrayed with full action and dialogue.

The jury retires; brings in a guilty verdict. A scream—and cunningly the camera eye wanders over the courtroom seeking the source of that scream. Just as your eye would.

Then you get the full action and dialogue in the truth of that murder. In each of the three characterizations you have the same actors but motives change—they are seen through different eyes. It is a striking idea and to Director Blystone go highest honor for the results.

This film is a notable achievement. And you will observe that the microphone has been subordinated to the camera without loss of talkie values.

Also on the Modern and Beacon bill are "The Devil's Appletree," "Apartment Hunting," "The Music Box Revue" and "The Royal Hawaiians."

Writers to Lecture at Summer Course

Middlebury, Vt., May 27—The 16th session of the Breadloaf writers' conference of Middlebury College, which opens July 1, promises to be one of the most interesting in the history of the school, according to the program announced by Dean Wilfred E. Davison.

The visiting lecturers for the summer session are Robert Frost, poet; Edward Markham, poet; Alfred Hitchcock, author and English teacher; Sinclair Lewis, novelist; William W. Ellsworth, publisher and author; Percy MacKaye, playwright and essayist.

THEIR SHADOWS TALK!

Mary Duncan and Warner Baxter in unusual all-talking picture, "Thru Different Eyes," at Modern and Beacon.

It'll Be Applesauce for Helen Morgan

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, May 27—The pleasingly plump Helen Morgan, erstwhile hostess of one of New York's fashionable night clubs and the Julie of Ziegfeld's "Show Boat," has been corraled by Paramount.

Miss Morgan, who would really go on the eighteen-day diet to get her form in motion picture proportions, will be starred in "Applause," based on a novel by Beth Brown.

Naturally her singing is the chief consideration, for she has a voice that wins. Ask anyone who heard her warble in "Show Boat," in the movie and on the stage and later on the Victrola. With this voice as a background and with Roubin Mamoulin directing her, La Belle Morgan ought to make the Kitty Darling, queen of burlesque, that she will essay, something worth while.

Mamoulin directed "Marco Millions," "Wings Over Europe" and other Theater Guild plays. His name is magic in theater circles. Miss Morgan, who was recently acquitted on a charge of selling intoxicants at her night club, is lucky in more ways than one.

OUTWARD BOUND.

While the stage producers are making up their minds to film Broadway successes intact, Warner Brothers have stolen a march on them. "Outward Bound," a Pulitzer prize play, will be translated into a talkie, with a London cast playing the same parts they are now playing in London.

This ran several years ago in New York, but it is only now playing in England. It was something of a sensation a few years ago dealing, as it does, with a very unique idea of life after death. Darryl Zanuck says it will be filmed almost exactly as it was produced on the stage.

It seems to me that I heard Helen Morgan was signed by Winfield Sheehan when Winnie was in New York lining up all the available stage favorites. She may have been signed at that time by the Fox company, but her first appearance in the movies will probably be in "Treasure Girl," Gershwin's musical comedy which Pathe is to produce.

At the time Mr. Sheehan spoke of signing her Miss Garden was described as a young woman with an operatic voice. She is better known on Broadway, however, than she is in Hollywood or any of the surrounding country. But if she doesn't make "Treasure Girl"—and it seems fairly certain that she will—in a few months, no one will have to ask: "Who is Helen Garden?"

SIGNS CONTRACT

The only two colored actors under contract in the movies are Stepin Fetchit and Nina May. No need to tell about Stepin. He has been described in fan magazines and newspapers until his fame is an accepted thing. Nina May, who made a sensational success in "Blackbirds of 1928" in New York, has been signed on a long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, following her work in King Vidor's production, "Hallelujah." She has gone to New York, but will return in time for the opening of "Hallelujah."

* * *

So many things to hear about when one has been away for three months. Who is "keeping company" with whom and why is always a popular topic in Hollywood. One of the new crushes is Buster Collier and Marie Prevost. Phyllis Haver's chum. There are those who intimate that Marie is matrimonially inclined, but others are less convinced that the Prevost-Collier romance is anything so permanent.

OLYMPIA HOLDS DESERT SONG OVER

Due to the success of "The Desert Song" at the Washington St. Olympia and Fenway Theatres, the management have held this film over for this week. In adapting, "The Dessert Song" to the screen, the producers decided to produce it as a duplicate of the stage presentation. The result demonstrates the potentialities of sound pictures, opens to moving pictures the possibilities of producing successful operettas and shows that audiences can be made to forget they are viewing a picture; and instead feel they are actually seeing and hearing the players on the stage.

John Boles

The music has excellent rhythm and charm. John Boles, in the leading role, does it in a manner that makes him stand out. He has a baritone voice that carries plenty of personality. Carlotta King puts her vocal numbers over splendidly. Miss King has a screen personality which assures her a place in pictures. Duets by the two are of high calibre. The chorus of 100 voices is especially effective.

Louise Fazenda and Johnny Arthur team up for comedy Vitaphone acts and Movietone news complete the bill.

May Party to Aid Somerville Sports

A May festival will be held tomorrow evening in Knights of Columbus Hall, Highland ave., Somerville, under the auspices of St. Clement's Athletic Association. Irish music and dancing, whist and bridge will be among the attractions. The committee is headed by the Rev. John J. Twiss, spiritual director of the organization, with the Rev. Thomas F. McCarthy, pastor, as honorary chairman. Eugene McCabe will be floor director.

BRIDGE DRAMA SCOLLAY'S BILL

"No Defense," a melodrama that is now making its first Boston showing at the Scollay Square Theater, has for its star Monte Blue, who plays the part of Western bridge builder. Costarring with him is the petite May McAvoy, as a Boston society girl who falls in love with the strapping westerner.

The story opens with Monte sternly ordering May, the daughter of his boss, to stop smoking when he finds her with a lighted cigarette near stored explosives. She persists in smoking, and is spanked by the Westerner after she calls his bluff. The romance beings then and there.

Monte is invited to attend a party in May's home in Boston, and he cuts a very sorry figure in his ill-fitting evening clothes. Disgusted and disappointed in her lover, she dismisses him and he returns to the construction camp.

Their romance is entirely shattered when the bridge he built collapses during the dedicatory exercises, due to faulty steel which May's brother had ordered that he might save the difference in cost to supply the wants of his extravagant wife. To keep knowledge of his son's criminal conduct from the prostrated father, Monte takes the blame for ordering the inferior steel. Then comes the trial in Boston. The grand jury investigates the catastrophe, and Monte, rather than shift the blame to his sweetheart's brother is ostracised from the Harper family and made an outcast.

Supporting the stars are Kathryn Carver, William Desmond, William Tooker, Lee Moran and Bud Marshall.

Le-Paul, exponent of card manipulations, is first on the stage program. His card tricks are done with lightning speed. Second, is Frank Carroll and John Gorman, who offer a melange of bright bits of comedy and harmony singing in their appealing little skit entitled "Stylish Harmony Comedians." Anderson and Graves follow in comedy dialogue called "Taking Her Fishing." "Who In Paris" is propelled by Harry Lang and Bernice Haley. Closing the bill are the Marcus Sisters and Carlton Bros. in a comedy classic dance revue.

Emerson Class Hears Minister

"The difficulty with most of us is not that we are bad, but only pre-occupied, and religion in itself is vain unless it helps us to be just and upright in all the relations of life," the Rev. Gardiner M. Day told the 75 members of the graduating class of Emerson College of Oratory at the baccalaureate services in Tremont Temple Church. President Henry L. Southwick of the college read the lesson.

Naughty May!

MAY McAVOY

The brave and stalwart Monte Blue tells her not to smoke and then he spanks her in "No Defense."

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

What Have Power Interests Got to Conceal?

Away down South in Dixie Santa Claus is not dead, nor is his bounty restricted to Christmas time.

Ask William S. Lavarre and Harold Hall, two New Yorkers with very limited newspaper experience and no capital, who were supplied with a bag of gold by the International Paper & Power Company and authorized to buy newspapers right and left in the land of cotton.

They told the Federal Trade Commission recently of gaily spending $870,000 of the Power Company's money to buy four papers, and trying to get their hands on a dozen more. All the Power Company received in return was the notes of the two young gentlemen, who had tried to borrow from bankers and failed.

They said the stock of the purchased newspapers was "morally pledged" to their backers. But Lavarre and Hall neglected the important formality of putting the stock into the Power Company's hands. Instead, they kept it in their own safe deposit vaults.

This enabled them, in their April 1 statement to the United States Government, to report themselves as owners of the newspapers. If the stock had been handed to the Power Company as collateral the Power Company's interest would have had to be reported to the Government.

The law requires a report of "any person, association or corporation" that "has any interest, direct or indirect, in the said stock." Perhaps they made a little slip in not reporting the interest of the Power Company, to which the stock was "morally pledged."

The real ownership of the purchased newspapers was concealed not only from the United States Government but from the editors as well. Charles O. Hearon, editor of the Spartansburg (S. C.) Herald and the Journal, has wired his resignation to Lavarre, stating that he had not agreed

"to become the editor of newspapers owned or controlled by the International Paper & Power Company or any special interests."

Fitzhugh McMaster has written Lavarre that

"I certainly would never have accepted the position as editor of the Columbia (S. C.) Record if I had understood it was owned or controlled in any way by a power company or any public utility company."

The Lavarre-Hall episode was another example of the underhand methods of the Power Trust in bribing, corrupting and secretly buying up the nation's sources of news.

Other business interests are content to let an independent press present to the public the facts concerning their operations.

What have the power companies to conceal?

Why do they require a kept press?

And what do the decent leaders in the electric light and power business think of the freebooting, strong-arm, public-be-damned element in their midst, undoing the "public relations" work of a dozen years and casting a black shadow over the future of the industry?

Bargain for Lawbreakers

Easy to Suggest, Hard to Enforce

Senator Jones, of Washington, who takes prohibition seriously and invented the "5 and 10 law"—five years in prison, $10,000 fine for carrying liquor—has another plan to make prohibition real.

He says it is a disgrace to fine a man with a bottle on his hip only $5. If you take prohibition seriously you will agree with him. To be allowed to spurn the Constitution and break the law for $5 is certainly a bargain.

The question is, do you believe that prohibition really can't be enforced?

If by a stroke of the pen or a Constitutional amendment it were possible to end drunkenness, and the vice, misery and crime that accompany drunkenness, every decent man WOULD BE FOR PROHIBITION.

But those that sincerely desire temperance and better conditions and that originally favored prohibition in the hope that it might succeed are now bitterly disappointed.

Instead of having beer properly brewed and whiskey distilled under proper regulations and government supervision, you have now the health-destroying "home brew," and you have millions of people drinking deadly bootleg alcoholic poisons, often ending in immediate blindness and death, inevitably ruining health.

You have as a by-product of prohibition a dreadful crime wave, an army of thugs, bootleggers, hijackers, holdup men, gangsters, racketeers.

Nobody can deny that this is the outburst of the bootleg liquor trade.

And nobody can deny that the bootleg liquor trade is one of the by-products of prohibition.

And everybody knows that without prohibition there would be no bootlegging. And without bootlegging there would be none of the hijacking; none of the nation-wide drug peddling.

Why not, as this newspaper recommended day after day before prohibition came, CLASS WHISKEY AND GIN WITH MORPHINE, COCAINE AND THE OTHER DRUG POISONS, WHILE PERMITTING THE SALE UNDER GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION AND WITHOUT THE SALOON OF LIGHT WINES AND BEERS THAT MANY NATIONS HAVE TAKEN FOR CENTURIES WITHOUT DRUNKENNESS?

That is the course that Thomas Jefferson urged most earnestly. He lived in a day when whiskey was practically the only drink, and urged the encouragement of light wines and beer, importing his own light wines from France, recommending to the Legislature of Virginia a skilful English brewer.

Jefferson was no drunkard, he was no fool. He wrote the Declaration of Independence.

And if he were here he would fight a law that is unreasonable and cannot be enforced.

Prohibition Has Improved Music

By FRANKLIN COLLIER

Mrs. Solomon Says—

By HELEN ROWLAND

Consider, my Daughter, the POSES wherewith a man deceiveth himself. For in these he taketh great stock.

Lo, he saith, 'I hate perfumes! They are an abomination in my nostrils and an affliction to my spirit."

Yet, behold it is the damsel that anointeth herself in spikenard and myrrh and black narcissus and imported bath salts, who stirreth his imagination. Yea, it is she that smelleth like a Sultan's harem, and wafteth fragrance in passing, that causeth him to lift his eyes.

And many a man hath mistaken a sweet scent for a sweet disposition, and an imported sachet for "sex appeal."

He saith, "Go to. I despise flattery, and a gooey woman getteth my goat. Yea, verily, she insulteth mine intelligence!"

Yet, behold I have seen men run from a straightforward damsel as from a small boy with a machine gun. Yea, she is hated like a prohibition agent.

But a damsel that pinneth medals on a man, extolleth his ways, and saith always "How wonderful!" is never among the wall flowers. She is as a soothing poultice to the inferiority complex, and wine to the vanity.

He saith, "Lo, I cannot bear a loud woman; and a forward damsel that arrayeth herself as a human shriek offendeth my soul and maketh me to blush."

Yet, the shrinking violets continue to adorn the walls of the ballroom, and the modest wrens to hover in the cloak-room, while the human peacock divideth her dances among the multitude and the "fire alarm" cannot count her partners.

He saith, "I shall never marry! Give me free life and fresh air! For I take NO woman seriously, but every one as a new experiment."

Yet, be of good cheer, For, tomorrow, the "marrying mood" shall descend upon him, and he shall feel sorry for himself. And, behold, the woman who seeth him first shall ! id him to the altar without effort.

He saith, "I cannot abide a stupid woman, and a dumbell is a weariness to the spirit."

Yet the prizes continue to go to the beautiful and dumb. And what woman with brains hath ever drawn a peach in the Garden of Love?

Whom, then, doth a man deceive, with all his poses, my Daughter? Verily, verily, he deceiveth only himself. For in his heart, every man believeth that he is immune to women and their wiles. Yet in the end every man falleth for that which he pretendeth to corn.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I'm working in the mountains these days.

I am driving ahead on a big job an I spend most of my time locked in a small room, away from all distractions. The room is crammed with the paraphernalia of my work. There are even notes pinned to the walls—wherever I look I see part of my job.

And I like it. There's nothing more exciting than a big chore, if it's after your heart.

But once in a while it gets me. Suddenly I'll grow edgey, irritable, sick of the pestering details, the personal atmosphere. Then I'll be overcome by self-pity, resentment and rebellion. I'll think how jolly it would be to be free—how hard worked I am—how everyone picks on me—etc., etc.

Formerly, when this mood came upon me, it would have me down for days. Now I've learned a way to cure it.

I go out to a place where there is a wide view.

I go out from the little room in which I work. I go out beyond the familiar fences and yards and houses which have all become identified with my work and my discontent—and

Out until suddenly, at a turn in the trail, the earth seems to drop away, and I stand, suspended, above a void.

Half a mile below, the river winds through a tremendous gorge. Above—the endless sky. Midway—the tumbled range.

To the east, to the south, to the west, to the north the mountains heave, sun drenched, star cooled.

Turquoise and emerald they are, cobalt, aquamarine, and with the passing of the day the violet shadows flood their gullies like spilled wine.

Far up, so far they are but drifting, circling specks, the eagles watch at noon.

Far off, so far they are but ghostly, circling sounds, coyotes call at night.

I look—and look—and let my spirit go.

Till gradually I lose my pestering sense of self and am as one with that vast, timeless void—

One with the sweep of river and the swoop of wing—the patient ranges and the evening star.

And, for a moment, glimpse infinity! And then go back to work with eyes that, for a little, see beyond mywalls.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 27—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and a fine letter from our old pastor, Harry B. Lewis, and to the most unsatisfying breakfast I ever ate of fried herring, tin pineapple and cocoa. Came Clair Maxwell and Norman B. Anthony, Jr., and we discussed our various jounts with journalism.

All afternoon trying to discard a few worn clothes and longed for an attic, it being especially difficult to part with old shoes. Then walked through the colorful Paddy's market with its shouting hub-bub and elbow-jabbing and bought sassafras to make tea.

In the evening with my wife to call on Florence Simrall from Lexington and to a Syrian cafe and colorful, too, with strange odors and a crone told fortunes. Walked home and passed the Morgan mansion where the pipe smoking watchmen always keep silent and read Chic Sales' hilarious book, "The Specialist."

Trained animals acts are almost of the past in vaudeville acts and the larger circuses. S. P. C. A. propaganda, stressing cruelty dumb beasts often endure, and frequent arrests of their owners, are largely responsible. Too, the picturesque vagabonds with velveteen coats and rings in their ears, who journeyed forth each spring with performing bears, are thinning. A half hundred used to winter in a little Jersey town. This spring only eight set off on wandering migrations to a thousand Main streets.

Tony, leading his moth-eaten bruin into town by a nose ring, was a welcome relief in the monotonous tedium of a small town 25 years ago. Tony's comadio life offered an enthralling touch of romance to those of us who had never been out of the country. Tony came from an entirely different world and his odd tongue awakened wonder. Adored by youngsters, he was a nuisance to grown-ups for his bear caused runaways. A horse is often terror-stricken by the smell of a bear and many teams bolted before Tony crossed the lower Chicamagua bridge into town.

Yet nothing topped the excitement of a good runaway. It happened so suddenly. One moment the street was inert and the next galvanized into an electrical expectancy. Around the court house corner hell-for-leather came the frightened horse, nostrils dilated and eye flashing, while the vehicle careened crazily from side to side. Everybody made a half-hearted attempt to stop it, but it usually wound up with a crash against a telephone post. Then the horse, all lathered and steaming, was led meekly through town to the stable. And there was something to talk about for days.

A circus parade was always good for a few hair-raising runaways. The manager of the circus—even John Ringling used to perform the rite—drove in advance of the parade warning farmers to "hold your horses, the elephants are coming!" Runaways were costly in damage suits and too many resulted in the "Hey Rube!" call to battle on the circus lot.

A musical show presents a group of the Gibson girls of the Nineties, but not half the audience sees the humor of their sailor hat and tailored suit costume of the period. They are too young, but you should see the old boys chuckle.

A gentleman who saw the highbrow conversational play, "Serena Blandish," writes in he doesn't know whether it was "too serene" or "too blandish," but he muffed it.

From a magazine article: "The small town visitor should embrace New York as a rousing adventure. He should be first and last to retire. Go places, see things in the Manhattan tempo. And what does it matter if he staggers to his hotel at the first thin glare of the sun?"

It doesn't matter a whole lot, but some of the boys have caught their necks in revolving doors doing that.

A hog-calling contest is announced for a New York farm exhibition and only a desperate need to fill two more lines could induce us to say it will all sound like a lot of hoo-ee-ey!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

PARKING engineers are now planning a town of twenty million people of the pedestrian type.

They will try their scheme on New York. If it works they will try it on Laughing Junction, Idaho.

A city of twenty million souls and heels is not impossible. This new civic epidemic will cover sections of New Jersey, New York and Connecticut.

We would hate to be the letter carrier in that town.

When you pack twenty million people under one municipal charter it means that you will need a two-car garage for the telephone book.

There are only six million names in New York now, and you need a crowbar to turn over the telephone catalogue.

Civic pride has changed in the last few stages of decades.

The old-time citizen used to boast about his town's park system, the water works and city hall.

Now, when you visit Scattered Sand, Neb., the natives point with pardonable bias to the phone book and say, "We got three pages of Smiths."

That's how towns grow now. They used to add to a city by building car barns, terminals, churches and schools.

All they do today is to stick another page into the telephone volume.

When New York is a burg of twenty million citizens it will cover an area of 5828 squarified miles. Every family will own its own home with a garden, fresh air, sunlight and a pup tent for the flivver.

Fresh air and sunlight are all right. If you are used to them.

But if you suddenly place a New Yorker in the open air his hair will turn gray, his lapels will palpitate and his teeth will fall out.

Like a grasshopper trying to jump the grand canyon, we should go at this thing in little leaps.

We are used to our air when it is a rich mixture of dust, gasoline fumes and polka dots.

A town where every family resides in its own home is a fine thought if it didn't mean the renaissance of the banck-fence quarrels.

Having lived in a New York apartment for 15 years, we are used to giving lawn parties on the fire-escape and going for long rambles in a window box containing one withered geranium and a terrace of garlic.

The cliff-dwellers of Manhattan have been acclimated to gloom, modernistic dampness and the comforts of attrition.

In fact, any time you find a New Yorker out in the open air you can bet your most southern dollar that he has been evicted by his landlord.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THIS is the song no master ever caught
To play again on harp or violin,
For notes are here by but one Master wrought
As winds creep out and in.

The music of the pines, in rising, swells
To majesty, then ebbs and faints away;
Of dim, mysterious forest depths it tells
That bar the light of day.

In wild and ever-changing melodies,
Now slow, now swift, now murmurous, now high,
It sings the epics of uncounted trees
That toss against the sky.

A song is here no hand shall ever tame
To give again in measured swept refrain;
From out the boundless deeps of heaven it came,
And there returns again.
